

BROWDER CONVICTED, GIVEN FOUR YEARS AFTER COMMUNIST PLEADS OWN CASE

Party To Be United for Victory In 1940, Farley Declares Here

DEMOCRATIC CHIEF REFUSES TO TALK ABOUT CANDIDATES

Philadelphia, Chicago or San Francisco To Be Meeting Place, He Says; Pays Tribute to Boyd.

By L. A. FARRELL

Take it from James A. Farley if there are differences within the Democratic party ranks they will be settled by the time the national convention rolls around and the party's presidential nominee, whoever he may be, will go on to victory in November.

The postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic national committee and good shepherd of all good party workers, gave the tip-off here yesterday when he said the 1940 convention wouldn't last any longer than the Philadelphia convention in 1936 which was all over in three days or just about as long as it took the powers-that-be to reel off the program.

Neutral on Site.

The convention, Big Jim revealed, will be at Philadelphia, Chicago or San Francisco. He has no choice but will leave the time and place up to the national committee, which meets February 5 to settle the business.

Farley came to town to be present at ceremonies marking the retirement of James R. Boyd, superintendent of the Railway Mail service for the fourth district, and to attend a reception given in his honor by the auxiliary of the mail service. He paid high tribute to Mr. Boyd and shook hands with some 2,000 mail service workers and their wives, making it 5,000 for the day as he had 3,000 to his credit from a visit to Clemson College in South Carolina, yesterday morning.

Silent on Candidates.

Bald and bland, as usual, the genial generalissimo of good Democrats arrived at the Terminal station at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon to be met by Postmaster Lon Livingston and a delegation of railway mail service workers who were to escort him to the new postoffice for the Boyd ceremony. A delegation of the working press was on hand and Big Jim took his usual time out to help the boys earn their bread (and cake) without the sweat of their brow.

"Is there anything to the reports that a Hull-Farley ticket is in the making?" Big Jim was asked.

"I cannot discuss personalities and I can't discuss candidates," was the prompt reply.

"Will the convention site and date be selected by the committee at its February 5 meeting?" was the next query.

"Yes," the subject of the interview.

High Democrats Mourn at Bier of Republican 'Lion'

Big men in the councils of the Democrats, they laid aside party lines with a grieving capitol yesterday to pay tribute to the deceased "Lion of Idaho," Republican Senator William E. Borah. B. E. BROOKS, 56, CONTRACTOR, DIES

Specialist in Levee Work Began His Career at 14 With Team of Mules.

B. E. Brooks, who began his business career at the age of 14 with a high school education and a team of mules and became the head of one of the south's largest contracting firms, died unexpectedly of a heart attack yesterday morning at his home, 1286 Springdale road. He was 56 years old.

The Brooks-Calloway Company, of which he was president, recently moved its headquarters from Atlanta to Memphis, and while it may not be well known to the average citizen it is the organization on which the federal government has been largely depending in recent years for the all-important work of keeping the Mississippi river within its banks.

As specialists in levee construction work since 1929, the firm has been in charge of some of the largest projects of their kind ever undertaken in Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi.

And the guiding spirit behind the company's development was Mr. Brooks, who, 42 years ago, determined to follow in the footsteps of his father, J. M. Brooks, of Molena, Ga., who was one of the first contractors in the state.

Graduating from the Molena high school at 14, he acquired two mules, a scraper, and went to work on his first job as his own boss—grading for a section of the Central of Georgia railroad between Atlanta and Macon.

In a very few years he had moved to Atlanta and his activities.

'Serious Concern' Is Expressed Over Lengthy Detaining of Shipping.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The United States has expressed to Great Britain "its serious concern" over the treatment British authorities are according American shipping in the Mediterranean area, particularly at Gibraltar.

This was disclosed when the State Department made public an aide memoire, handed to the British ambassador Saturday, which protested that American ships at Gibraltar were being detained three times as long as British contraband authorities hold Italian ships there.

Aide Memoire.

The aide memoire pointed out that they were held an average of 12.4 days each, whereas Italian ships were held an average of only four days, and demanded assurances that the examination of American ships be speeded up. The present situation was declared to discriminate against American shipping.

(In London, foreign office officials, denying any British discrimination against American ships, said that the United States blockade protest might be due to "transitory technical difficulties," according to the United Press.)

The protest was another in a series of representations made recently by the United States on such matters as Britain's blockade of German exports, her taking American ships into the combat area, and her interference with American mails.

Talk of Tobacco.

In addition, Secretary Hull called the British ambassador, Lord Lothian, to his office today and drew his attention to the plight of American tobacco growers as a result of the blockade.

Germans Police Railway Running From Reich Through Russian Poland.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Rebellingness of train crews on the line linking Germany with Rumanian wheat and oil has forced the Reich to send an armed force to police the railway through Russian Poland and the first troops already have reached the Rumanian border.

Russia agreed to the occupation of more than 200 miles of the line by German troops, according to official information received here from both Berlin and Moscow.

Rumania Reassured.

It is understood here Rumania has been assured the new agreements do not mean a big concentration of German troops near her borders.

Some diplomats pointed out, however, that the presence of German soldiers, even as railway police, might be used to bring pressure on Rumania.

It was understood that Russia has withdrawn some troops from the region.

Moscow Consents.

Moscow gave consent to German policing, it was understood, after Berlin complained that shipments over the line were delayed and sometimes lost, that the train crews were rebellious and inefficient in handling the transit.

PRESIDENT BOWS IN GRIEF AT BIER OF SENATOR BORAH

Simple Grandeur Marks State Funeral for Idaho Statesman; Diplomats, Cabinet, Jurists Attend.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and other national leaders bowed in grief today at a state funeral for the revered elder statesman, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho.

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, and many another brushed tears from their eyes in the hushed half-gloom of the senate chamber as congressional chaplains prayed over the slate-gray, steel casket containing the remains of the man who came out of the west 33 years ago to win fame in some of history's most momentous debates.

After the ceremony the doors were locked, and the body lay in state, except for an honor guard of policemen, until the time came at 5:10 o'clock (Atlanta time) to start the long journey back to Idaho, where burial will take place Thursday in Boise.

Solemn Grandeur.

Aside from the solemn grandeur of the scene—floor and galleries packed with "ack-lad diplomats, legislators, judges and Borah's friends from private life—the ceremony itself was simple.

Mrs. Henrietta Bagger Plum, well-known Washington singer, opened the service with the hymn, "Lead Kindly Light." There was no accompaniment.

"I am the resurrection and the life, saith the Lord," began the house chaplain, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery. The senate chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, then read a lesson from the 14th chapter of St. John and the eighth chapter of Romans.

Another song by Mrs. Plum, "Abide With Me," and a prayer, including a supplication for Mrs. Borah and the late senator, concluded the service. The Rev. Dr. Phillips raised his hand over the casket in a blessing.

F. D. R. Sorrowful.

President Roosevelt sat with folded hands and sorrowful mien directly in front of the casket in the well of the chamber. Across the aisle were members of the supreme court.

Behind the court were ranged the representatives of foreign countries.

Mrs. Borah, known affectionately to thousands in Washington as "Little Borah," sat in a senate lobby.

New Plan To Aid Defendants Without Counsel Is Urged

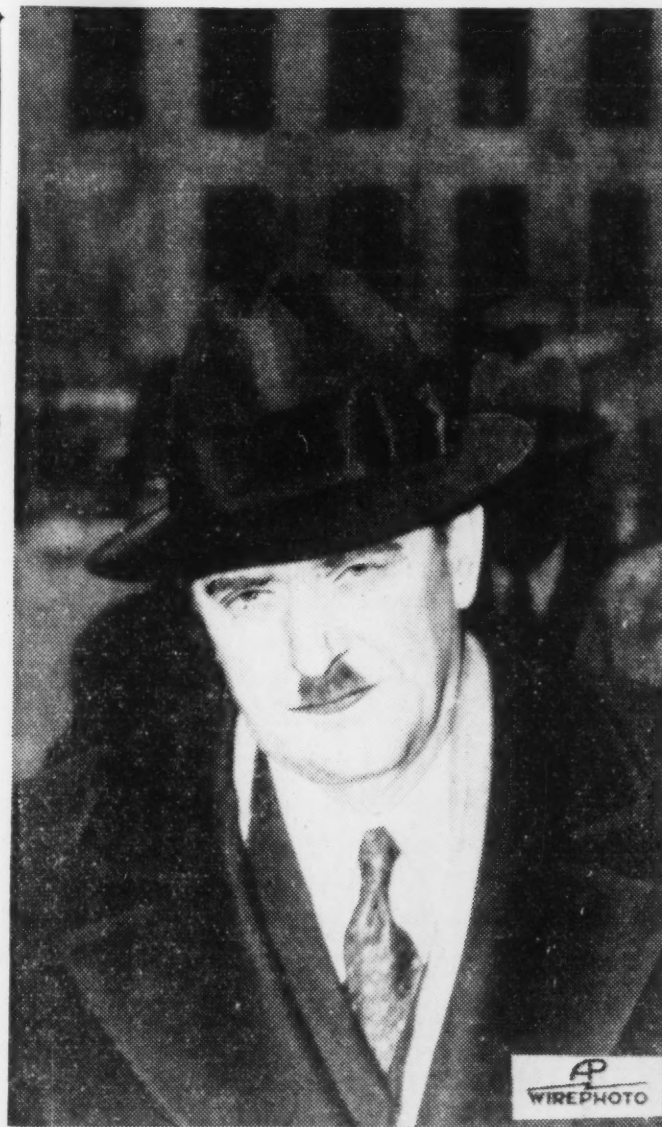

By LUKE GREENE.

A revolutionary plan, for correcting existing abuses in the system whereby lawyers are appointed for felony defendants who are without counsel in the criminal divisions of Fulton county superior court, has been recommended by the Atlanta Bar Association and will be inaugurated as soon as details can be worked out, Thomas Evins, chairman of a special association committee named to study present practices, said yesterday.

The junior counsel group will be composed principally of the younger lawyers. The senior counsel will consist of the most prominent attorneys in the city—those whose experience in the courts qualifies them to serve as advisers.

Evins explained the plan not only would help the defendants by giving them better representation, but they will have the help

Another snowfall is forecast for this morning, but the Weather Bureau tempered its prediction by announcing that temperature recordings are on the upswing.

The snow will be confined to light flurries mixed with considerable rain and a low mercury reading of 25 degrees is expected. In fact, bureau officials optimistically said "the worst is over."

Yesterday a high reading of 43 and a low of 18 degrees indicated moderation. It probably marked the end of the coldest January on record with a temperature deficiency so far of 162 degrees.

Increasing cloudiness with the continued subfreezing temperature will make conditions favorable for light snow. Rain moving in from the west will freeze in north Georgia but revert to a rain-snow mixture as it turns southward.

All Georgia Radio Waves To Be Moved

Mexico To Outlaw Border Stations, So FCC Will Shift U. S. Spots.

Some time this coming summer owners of Georgia radio receiving sets will twiddle the dial to the favorite station to find that it isn't there. They will get a station, all right, but it will be a newcomer which has just moved in from some other spot on the dial.

Ninety per cent of the 815 radio stations in the United States will be moved from 10 to 40 kilocycles away from their accustomed spot, and every one of Georgia's 14 stations will be affected.

Reason for it all is the great continent-wide reallocation of stations now being worked out by the Federal Communications Commission, the biggest etheral switching around since the federal government stepped in in 1928 to unsnarl the tangled airways in which a man might get not one, but two or three stations at the same place on the dial.

Mexico Bothersome.

They did a good job that time and since then there has been mighty little overlapping of stations in this country. Two years ago Canada and Cuba came in under what was called the Havana Treaty, and that further eliminated overlapping from stations broadcasting from those two countries.

Mexico, though, was the trouble-maker, after the United States, Canada and Cuba had gotten their channels clear, and Mexico remained aloof.

Powerful Station.

Her powerful border stations, set up just across the line by men denied a license in the United States, continued to ride in on everybody's wave length, muddling up symphony music with a rumba band or tangling an American comedian with a plug for some vitality-restorer.

Unexpectedly, though, on December 28, Mexico decided to come in. She signed the treaty and in so doing outlawed the tremendously powerful border stations which had been interfering with stations in the United States operating on the same kilocycle band.

The outlawing of those stations comes in a clause which says that

FEDERAL JURY OUT ONLY 45 MINUTES IN PASSPORT TRIAL

Correspondence School Graduate Brushes His Counsel Aside; 'Proud' of Moscow Affiliation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—

(AP)—Earl Russell Browder, the Kansas-born American Communist leader, was convicted of passport fraud in federal court today and sentenced to four years in prison and fined $2,000.

The jury of 11 men and a young woman deliberated only 45 minutes on the verdict after hearing Browder himself in a singular summation plead for his freedom for more than an hour. No other defense was offered.

Brushing aside his attorney, George Gordon Battle, Browder took the floor with the statement that he was a correspondence school lawyer.

The sentence was pronounced immediately after the jury was polled and a defense motion for delay was denied. It specified that two-year sentences on each of two counts must be served consecutively. The maximum prison sentence would have been 10 years.

In the momentary quiet that followed the verdict, Judge Cox turned in his chair and told the jury:

"I am not in the habit of thanking juries, but I must say that the verdict was the only possible one that could have been returned."

Perennial Candidate.

Browder, a perennial candidate for political office, was the Communist candidate for President in 1936 and is now a candidate for the seat in congress vacated by the recent death of Representative Sirovich, Democrat, New York.

Tonight, standing before some 20,000 persons in a Communist demonstration in Madison Square Garden, the 48-year-old convicted party head made it clear that this congressional candidacy would go on, and asserted that he considered his sentence "a great honor."

Browder presented a defenseless case after acknowledging at the outset that he had traveled incognito to and from conferences with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

He was accused specifically of borrowing the names of three other men and affixing them to passport visas.

This was done, his attorney explained, because as a widely-known agent of the Soviet Union Browder's travels through Europe would be beset by danger if his true identity became known.

Addressing the Jury.

Browder said he had no notion that he was a "better lawyer than my attorney."

"My own qualifications to argue the case are that I am infinitely familiar with the facts and that I have a law degree—obtained from a correspondence school," he said. "The prosecution," Browder declared, "has presented a case compounded of technicalities. It is necessary, therefore, to make a technical defense."

He cited his American birth and said:

"There is no such thing in the law as an illegal entry of a citizen of the United States."

As he continued he frequently

THREE APPOINTED TO CLAYTON BOARD

Judge Davis Appoints Evans, Mundy and McElroy After Vote.

Three Clayton county commissioners of roads and revenues were appointed yesterday by Judge James C. Davis, of the Stone Mountain circuit, to succeed two officials who were removed from office December 20, and another who resigned on the same day.

Chosen for the appointment by a special election held Saturday, the new commissioners are J. D. McElroy, of Oak district; L. A. Evans, of Lovejoy district, and James Mundy, of Jonesboro.

They will take office immediately and serve out the terms of W. S. Lee and Dr. J. R. Wallis, which expire December 31, and E. L. Stephens, which expires December 1, 1942. Lee and Stephens were removed from office and fined $25 after being found guilty of malpractice as charged by the November Clayton grand jury. Dr. Wallis, similarly charged, resigned before trial.

Under the Georgia code, the judge of the superior court is empowered to appoint county commissioners when a quorum ceases to exist. Judge Davis, instead, called for a special election and said his appointments would be contingent upon the results.

H. L. Turner, of Riverdale, was chosen in the election to succeed F. C. Cargile, former chairman of the board who also was dismissed from office. Turner, however, will be ineligible to serve as a commissioner until March 7, it was said, because he served as a tax commissioner in Clayton county until March 7, 1939.

Verdict Appealed. A fifth commissioner, H. Grady Moore, has agreed not to participate in county affairs pending appeal for a new trial on charges of malpractice. His hearing last December ended in a mistrial. According to the agreement, Mr. Moore will return to office if a new trial is granted and if he is acquitted of the malpractice charges. If the new hearing is not granted, however, he will resign.

Engineers Study Plans for North Avenue Underpass

No pigeon-hole here! Definitely out in the open (at this point) are the plans for the long-delayed $485,000 West North avenue underpass offered by the federal government. Seen studying them, in the course of an amicable conference to adjust details, are, left to right, W. B. Bean, engineer, and Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary, of the City Planning Commission, and A. H. Hutchinson, office engineer, and Courtland Gilbert, secretary, of the County Planning Commission.

Planning Commission Aides Confer on Underpass Issue

Progress Is Reported in Movement To Obtain Funds for Matching Federal Expenditures To Eliminate Dangerous North Avenue Grade Crossing.

A technical conference, to adjust any objections of the county to the city's plans for freeing $485,000 of federal funds earmarked for the West North avenue underpass, was held yesterday in the office of the County Planning Commission.

It was to this commission that the five county commissioners of roads and revenues last week referred a proposal from the city to match a $37,500 appropriation for rights-of-way to enable work to proceed on eliminating the dangerous 21-track grade crossing on North avenue just west of Marietta street and relieve traffic congestion.

In the conference were Raymond W. Torras, engineer-secretary of the City Planning Commission, and Courtland W. Gilbert, secretary of the County Planning Commission, and their respective aides, W. B. Bean and A. H. Hutchinson.

At the conclusion of the day it was announced, in a general way, that progress had been made and that further conferences would be held. Among the accomplishments, Secretary Gilbert said, were steps toward scaling down costs for certain properties needed for the right-of-way.

March 15 Is Deadline. When the sessions are completed, a full meeting of the County Planning Commission is to be held to determine its recommendation to the commissioners of roads and revenues, who have final word.

March 15 is the deadline for including the project in the 1940 county budget. Representatives of civic bodies, and others in close touch with the situation, expect a meeting to be held soon by the County Planning Commission so the final decision can be made possible without needless delay.

MINIMUM WAGE GETS UNANIMOUS SUPPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. (AP)—For the first time since enactment of the wage-hour law a proposed minimum wage, in the case 35 cents an hour for the knitted outerwear industry, received unanimous support at a public hearing which was concluded in three hours.

The minimum would increase wages of about 7,500 of the estimated 23,000 employees and would tend to decrease the number of industrial home workers, officials said.

GALLOGLY'S APPEAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Texas High Court Expected To Confirm Decision Returning Escape.

Assistant Attorney General Herschel Smith left yesterday for Austin, Texas, where tomorrow he will represent the state of Georgia before the Texas court of criminal appeals in arguments on Richard G. Gallogly's denied application for release on a writ of habeas corpus.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall said he expected the Texas high court to affirm the trial court's refusal to free Gallogly, which Arnall said, is the last chance the holdup slayer has of defeating Georgia's effort to return him to prison.

Gallogly, who escaped several months ago, already has been ordered back to Georgia by Governor W. Lee O'Daniel. He filed the habeas corpus which was denied and then appealed the decision. Meanwhile as asked freedom on bond but this was refused by the same court before which Smith will argue tomorrow.

Attorney General Arnall said he expected the final decision in the Gallogly case some time next month. Gallogly now is in the Dallas county jail.

MINISTERS' WEEK WILL BEGIN TODAY

Emory Is Host as Nearly 200 Enroll for Courses in Theology.

Nearly 200 clergymen this morning will begin short courses in theology at Emory university as part of the sixth annual Ministers' Week and lend atmosphere to the student-sponsored Religious Emphasis Week running concurrently.

Today's program will open with the first lecture of five short courses by members of the Chandler School of Theology, which is sponsoring the meeting of ministers from every southern state from West Virginia to Louisiana.

The lectures, which will be given in the theology building, are "Evangelism," by Dean H. B. Trimble; "Recent Trends in Theological Thinking," by Professor F. N. Parker; "The Church and Contemporary Social Movements," by Professor H. H. Harris; "Principles and Possibilities for Rural Churches," by Professor E. S. Johnson, and "The Minister and Recent Gospel Criticism," by Professor D. T. Rowlandson.

At 10 o'clock in Glenn Memorial chapel those participating in Ministers' Week will join students to hear Dr. Wyatt Aiken Smart, special speaker for Religious Emphasis Week.

Dr. Leroy Loemker, Emory professor of philosophy, will discuss "The Church in a World at War" at 11 o'clock. A faculty reception for the visitors will be held at 3:30 o'clock in the nurses' home.

At 7:30 o'clock in the chapel Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of the Union Theological Seminary in New York, will talk on "The Divine Immanence." Dr. Coffin, main speaker of Ministers' Week, opened the program last night when he delivered his first lecture on "Evolutionary Science."

Music for the programs which run through Friday will be furnished by the Emory university glee club.

According to Dr. Arva C. Floyd, acting professor of missions, who arranged the week's program, Ministers' Week is designed to furnish spiritual stimulus through concentrated study and emphasizes fellowship, disciplined thinking and corporate worship.

HONOR GRADUATES HELPED BY STATE

University System Gives Scholarships to Students With Promise.

Two hundred and twenty-four first honor graduates of Georgia's accredited high schools were given scholarships to units in the University System of Georgia last year in an effort to encourage promising students to receive their education within the state, "in the hope that they will remain and assist in developing Georgia," Chancellor S. V. Sanford announced yesterday.

"To every boy and girl poor in purse but rich in brain, the University System offers its greatest opportunities," the chancellor said. "We owe a duty to all students, but a special duty to train in the best possible way those most likely to become outstanding leaders."

The scholarships are for one year each, and the monetary value is equivalent to the matriculation fee in the unit chosen by the student. Scholarships are awarded on the recommendation of high school superintendents, and on their certification that the boy or girl is the first honor graduate.

In 1938 a total of 214 scholarships were awarded, and in 1937 a total of 163.

Button Sellers Canvass Atlanta for Polio Funds

Spitalny Girls, Salvation Army, Elks, Military Band Join in Drive.

Button sellers to the right of them and button sellers to the left of them greeted Atlantans on downtown streets yesterday afternoon, as the merry tinkle of silver and the crisp crackle of folded banknotes went to the aid of the Infantile Paralysis Fund.

Pretty girls from Phil Spitalny's All-Girl orchestra and from the Georgia State Girls' Military band opened the Button Week drive in connection with the celebration of the President's birthday. Lassies from the Salvation Army will join the button battalion today.

Thirty girls from the Draughon School of Commerce will sell tickets to the January 30 birthday dances in the lobbies of Atlanta banks on Friday, Fulton County Chairman Ivan Allen Sr. announced.

Dr. J. H. Etheridge, exalted ruler of the Atlanta lodge of Elks, announced appointment of a committee of Elks to aid in sales of tickets to the four big dances to be held January 30 at the Henry Grady, Ansley, and Biltmore hotels and the Shrine Mosque.

The Elks' committee includes Ira Chance, chairman; Wayne Smith, Wellborn Ellis, John Malone, Charles G. Gallaher, Wilson Randall, George Craig, Bob Dorsey, Bob Eubanks, J. W. LeBlanc, Henry Andrews, Herbert Smith, Charles G. Rainer, Ovis Roberts, John A. Thomson, J. Clayton Burke Jr., Ralph Blakely, Clifford Wheelless, and Jack Carroll.

General dance ticket sales downtown will be planned by Mrs. Ben S. Purse and Mrs. Alva McCrary, co-chairmen of ticket sales, at a meeting called for 11 o'clock this morning on the mezzanine floor of the Henry Grady hotel.

First of the 100 per cent contributors' cards were mailed yesterday to a number of small offices that have completed their quotas.

Members of the Peachtree Hills Woman's Club will give a "silver" tea for the benefit of the polio fund, from 3 to 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John T. Patton, 2299 Steven Long drive.

Mate Shunned Hollywood, Says Jean Parker

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Add causes for Hollywood divorces: The husband didn't like Hollywood.

Jean Parker, who once appeared in a movie called "Divorce in the Family," today testified in her divorce proceedings that George MacDonald, to whom she was married nearly four years ago, refused to become a part of Hollywood.

"His work and attitude were such," she told the court, "that he had no patience with my activities. He refused to become a part of Hollywood and my activities."

The MacDonalds separated nine months ago and Jean told the court, answering a question, that if there had been a possibility of a reconciliation it would have occurred since then.

Miss Parker said that there was constant friction because her and MacDonald's attitude didn't jibe, that he was indifferent, that he left her alone and otherwise was guilty of mental cruelty. She added that her husband never was guilty of physical cruelty — "I mean, he never struck me."

OLD FIRM SOLD.

HOGANSVILLE, Ga., Jan. 22.—Brazell-Trimble Company, said to be the oldest mercantile concern in Troup county, was sold recently to Charlie Jabaley and Sons of LaGrange. The business was organized in 1898 under the name of H. D. Brasell & Sons, which was changed to Brazell-Trimble Company in 1901. The Jabaleys have been in business in LaGrange since 1916.

view replied. "We hope to settle that business promptly."

"Where will the convention go?" he was asked.

"I have no idea."

"How many cities have let it be known they will put in bids?"

"Three, Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco."

"Who is making the highest and best bid?"

"We don't know yet. We have not heard from any of them. The offers will be ready by February 5."

Short Convention.

"Will the chairman make any recommendation as to the place and time?"

"No recommendation is contemplated. It makes no difference to the chairman where the convention is held."

"Will the convention last as long as did the one at Philadelphia?"

"Just about as long. Maybe it will take one more day."

"Do you mean that extra day will be allotted for nominating speeches that didn't take place at Philadelphia?"

"I do not mean anything in particular."

"You mean that whatever happens between now and convention time all will be well within the party then?"

"Yes, that's it."

"Do you expect the Democratic nominee, whoever he may be, to have as easy a time getting elected as he did in 1936?"

"Well, it's too early to start predictions along that line, but I do expect the party nominee to win the election."

"Who will nominate the postmaster general?"

"The president always nominates cabinet officers."

"Not a Candidate."

"Well, I mean who will place the postmaster general name before the national convention?"

"Who said his name was going before the convention? I'm not a candidate."

"Then came a question or two that the big man answered off the record. And a question or two, unanswered, which he asked to be stricken from the record. They were:

"Asked if he agreed with the idea of some party leaders that the Democratic convention should be held after the Republican meeting, the national chairman allowed he didn't care."

"Our committee will name the date and place when it meets February 5," he pointed out. "The Republican committee won't meet for the purpose until February 16. It looks like it will be up to them to decide whether they'll have their meeting before or after ours because by the time they meet they'll know pretty well about us when we won't know anything about their plans."

Praises Them All.

All efforts to get Brother Farley to talk about a third term, about Hull, about Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Paul V. McNutt or others whose names are heard in connection with the nomination were fruitless.

"He's a great fellow," or "He's a good fellow" was his comment at the mention of any leading Democratic prospect.

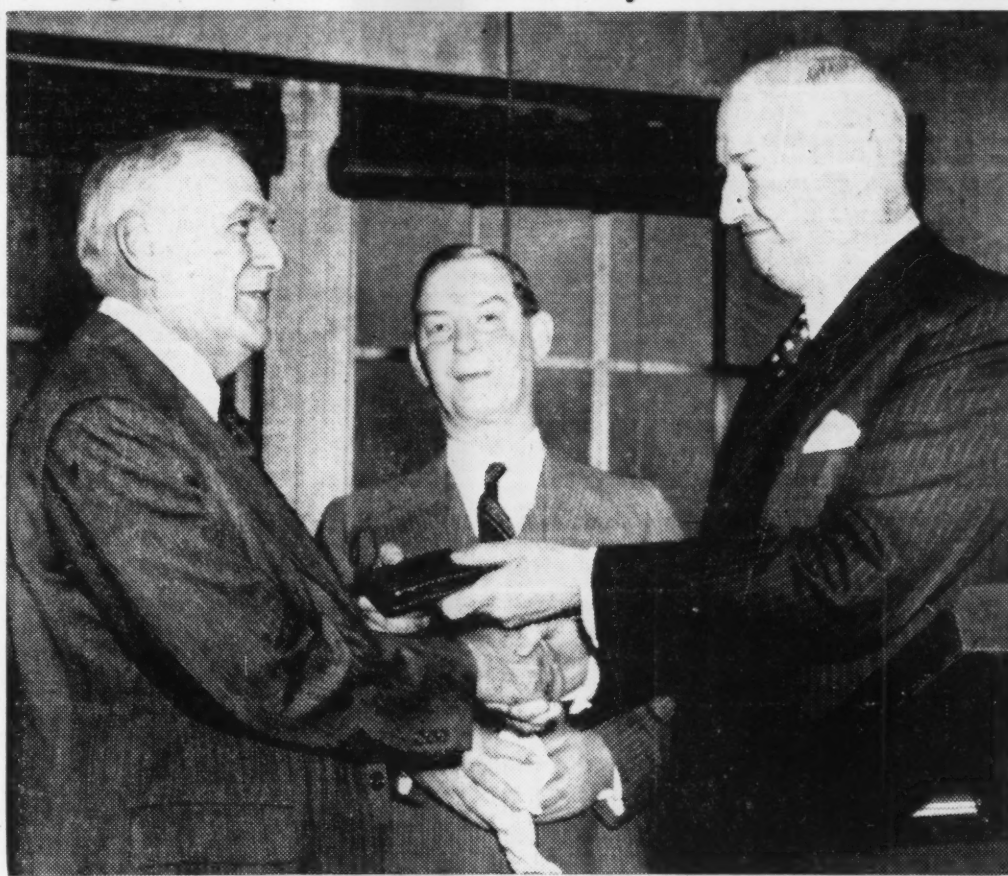

"Are there any bad fellows?" he was asked.

"Not in the Democratic party," he shot back. "There are many in the Republican party."

As Farley got off the train he was followed by Governor Rivers, who got on at Peachtree station with L. W. (Chip) Robert, secretary to the Democratic national committee; Attorney General Ellis Arnall, who got on at Toccoa whence he had gone to make a speech, and Congressman Ramspeck, who came down from Washington with the postmaster general.

Farley was asked if he dis-

Farley Honors Atlanta Railway Mail Service Chief

Postmaster General James A. Farley was in town yesterday but there wasn't any new post office to dedicate. So he took part in the ceremony marking the retirement of James R. Boyd, district superintendent of the railway mail service. The "General" is shown on the right presenting a watch to Mr. Boyd (left) while E. D. (Buck) Adams, the newly appointed district superintendent, looks on. The watch was a gift from the mail service workers, who served under Mr. Boyd during his 47 years of service.

cussed politics with Governor Rivers, who is Georgia's Democratic national committeeman.

"No, we just visited 20 or 30 minutes," he replied.

Reporters turned to the Governor.

"How about it?" Rivers was asked.

"I couldn't be expected to talk politics with the chairman of the national committee on hand," he replied with a smile. "Why, whatever I might say would be small news compared with what you can get out of him."

Arnall, likewise, dodged questions.

"I made a speech in Toccoa at noon and just happened on the train," he replied. "I had a nice personal visit with the postmaster general and my good friend from Newnan, Jim Cole, who is deputy assistant to Second Assistant Postmaster General Ambrose O'Connell."

As a matter of fact I know nothing of national politics."

Arnall's memory was refreshed a little and he recalled that he accompanied Governor Rivers on the Governor's last visit to President Roosevelt at Warm Springs.

"Yes, that was a purely personal visit, too," he said.

Nearly 1,000 men and women of the railway mail service greeted Mr. Farley at the post office building, where he was the principal speaker at the Boyd ceremony.

Mr. Boyd retired yesterday after 47 years in the railway mail service.

Sorry to Lose Boyd.

"I am happy to join in this tribute to Mr. Boyd," the postmaster general said. "He is one of the most outstanding men in the service and, while we are glad to see him retire, we are sorry that we must lose him."

He said that the business of the post office department is increasing each year and the complaints are getting less numerous.

"As a matter of fact, most of the complaints we get are against the postmaster general himself," he said with a smile. "And, they come from the Republicans who do not seem to like the idea of the postmaster general getting mixed up in politics occasionally."

E. D. (Buck) Adams, another veteran of the railway mail service, who succeeded Mr. Boyd to the post of superintendent, presided over the ceremony.

Postmaster General Farley presented the retiring official a fine watch, the present from his employees.

Mr. O'Connell spoke briefly as did Mr. Cole and Congressman Ramspeck. Postmaster Livingston joined Farley in the hand-shaking.

More Hand-Shaking.

A police escort was on hand to rush the postmaster general to the Ansley hotel where another thousand or more were on hand for the reception and more hand-shaking. The police escort waited at the hotel and by 6 o'clock Farley was on a train bound for Pensacola where he will resume his favorite sport, dedicating new post offices.

On Wednesday night he will be in Winston-Salem for a speech before the Chamber of Commerce.

"There won't be any politics in it," he said as his train pulled out. "They asked me to give them my views on current topics. I have them set down on paper and I'll let them have them."

FARLEY AT CLEMSON, HAILS DEMOCRACY

CLEMSON, S. C., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Postmaster General James A. Farley said today that democracy had been vindicated as the "finest form of government yet devised by man."

He spoke at dedication exercises for Clemson's new $90,000 postoffice building and later reviewed the Clemson college cadet corps.

FARLEY RECALLS 'FISH FRY'

LAGRANGE, Ga., Jan. 22.—Postmaster General Farley, recalling "fish fry days of 1932," when he was guest here of John E. Whitley, spoke briefly here tonight to several hundred residents who assembled to meet him.

Herman C. Fincher, LaGrange postmaster, presented Mr. Farley, who shook hands with those presented to him.

CONGREGATIONS AID FINN RELIEF DRIVE

Church Members, Old and Young, Give Liberally to Fund Here.

Church people of Atlanta, old and young, have been among the leaders in contributing to the Finnish Relief Fund, according to announcement yesterday at headquarters of the campaign here. Walter H. Rich is Atlanta chairman for the drive to aid the suffering civilian population of Finland.

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, reported that $279.10 was raised by his members at the two Sunday services, and other ministers announced similar activities among their congregations, although no figures on the amounts obtained were available.

The junior department of the West End Baptist Sunday school Monday forwarded $5 to campaign headquarters at the Henry Grady hotel, while the Pine Lake Baptist Sunday school sent in a total of $3.85, which its younger members had raised.

Younger children in the religious school of the Jewish Temple, through Rabbi David Marx, donated a total of $7.55. Dr. Marx said that this represented money which the children themselves had saved or earned, and was not the result of any special request from their parents.

"Each week," said Dr. Marx, "these smaller children raise a fund in this manner, and each week they take a vote to decide to which particular charity the money shall go. This time they voted, without a single dissenting voice, that the fund go for relief of the women, children and aged of Finland."

Brooks, it was learned, was in a fair condition at Emory hospital. Arrangements for New's funeral will be announced by a Conyers mortuary.

TRUCE IS REACHED IN CONTROVERSY OVER CAB SERVICE

Railroads Agree To Supply Taxi Company With Number of Passengers Needing Transportation

Truce in the war between the Black and White Cab Company and the railroads was reached yesterday when the railroad men agreed to furnish the cab company information as to the number of arriving passengers needing cabs, and a joint committee was agreed upon to supervise operation of the plan.

Eight railroads serving Atlanta had complained through their passenger agents that the city was getting a "black eye with the traveling public" because of the failure of cabs to meet the trains. The cab company had replied that it could not guarantee service without more definite information as to the number of passengers who would need taxis on arrival.

Joseph A. Higgins, general passenger agent of the Georgia Railroad and the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, was elected chairman of a committee to be made

Representatives of the taxi company.

This committee, it was agreed, would observe conditions under the new plan and take necessary steps to "insure the fullest possible service to the traveling public."

One of his largest projects required machinery and equipment valued at more than $500,000. The firm has just finished two levee jobs near Memphis.

Mr. Brooks was a Shriner and a member of the Druid Hills Baptist church.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Sam H. Rumph; a son, B. E. Brooks Jr.; a sister, Mrs. Zack Lawrence Jr., of Molena; a brother, J. L. Brooks, and a granddaughter, Juliana Rumph.

He was in charge of lowering the tracks when the present Union Station was built and he rapidly became known as the outstanding leader in his particular field.

Later came the specialization in the levee work on which he has been engaged almost continuously for more than 10 years. The manner in which he carried out the projects, meeting the strictest requirements of government engineers, led from contract to contract and today there are miles and miles of levees along the banks of the Mississippi which were under his direction.

Three Daily Prizes To Be Awarded For Nelson Eddy Toast to 1940

Readers Sending in Most Original and Appropriate Wish for This Year To Receive Cash in Contest Staged in Connection With "Balalaika" at Fox.

Love is his game and he plays it well. Nelson Eddy, as the Cossack troubadour, never was in finer voice as he sings gay songs, romantic melodies and rousing marches. With gypsy fire and fervor he pursues lovely Ilona Massey against the background of colorful old Russia.

Their latest co-starring M-G-M picture is "Balalaika," and is opening Thursday at the Fox theater.

For the next three days we are printing a toast to 1940, which we want you to use as a sample for your own.

Readers sending in the most appropriate and most original toast will be eligible to share in the daily prizes of $10, $5 and $1.50. Here is the first sample:

and she did herself proud with versions of "Oh Johnny" and "Saint Louis Blues" to say nothing of others.

Comedian Good.

But the outstanding attraction at the Fox this week is the comedian. He's Wally Brown and every inch a comedian. He doesn't stoop to the gutter to get a laugh. He gets them with facial expressions, arm maneuvering, voice imitations—anything but a shady joke. Melba, the dancer, balances the program.

"Hooray America" is the variety show at the Capitol which is the only "leg" attraction in town this week. The company presents an act, "Shanghai Sal," which depicts quite realistically the lives of the orient, the knife throwers and the girls. It's good.

There are three noteworthy acrobats in the show who are entertaining as long as they forget telling jokes and attend to business.

The show has some good lighting and scenery effects.

ORAZIO SURVIVORS DESCRIBE SHIP FIRE

Boat Almost Instantly Engulfed by Flames; All Passengers Reported Saved

MARSEILLE, France, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Survivors of the burning Italian liner Orazio told tales of escape in borrowed lifeboats on a stormy sea when 48 were landed here today.

The ship was a gigantic torch on the Mediterranean yesterday after a mysterious pre-dawn explosion, all but two of the vessel's lifeboats burned.

But rescue vessels sent over their own lifeboats and Italian officials said all 412 passengers were believed saved and most of the crew of 231, though 70 were not officially accounted for.

The Orazio, it was disclosed, was shaken by an explosion in the engine room and then almost instantly was in flames from bow to stern.

In Paris, an official statement denied what was termed a German insinuation that a French contraband control party was responsible for sabotage.

MAN, GIVEN LIFE, IS FREE FINALLY

New Trial Order Brings Acquittal Verdict.

Robert Lee Weaver, 26-year-old negro, who previously had been sentenced to serve his life in prison for the slaying of another negro, yesterday was acquitted by a jury in Fulton superior court.

Weaver, charged with the murder of Sallie Mae Hubbard in December 1938, won a new trial when the state supreme court set aside the previous conviction on the grounds that the trial judge, Paul S. Etheridge, erred in failing to charge the jury on voluntary manslaughter.

DRIVER, COMPANY SUED BY WOMAN

Plaintiff Charges Negligence in Auto Crash.

A $15,000 damage suit against Howard L. Jones, Atlanta taxi driver, and the Atlanta Baggage and Cab Company was filed yesterday in Fulton superior court by Harriett Kantor.

The amount is asked for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff January 15, when the auto in which she was riding was allegedly struck by a cab driven by Jones at Ellis and Courtland streets. The suit charged the driver with negligence.

ERLANGER TO PLAY 'LEAVE IT TO ME'

Broadway Musical Comedy Will Be Presented Here February 2-3.

"Leave It to Me," the Broadway musical comedy featuring Sophie Tucker, Victor Moore and William Caxton, will play at the Erlanger theater Friday and Saturday, February 2-3.

A matinee performance will be given February 3.

Tickets are now on sale to all three performances and may be ordered by mail from the Erlanger theater.

"Leave It to Me" is the musical comedy which was the medium that sent Mary Martin skyrocketing to movie and stage fame. She was the original "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" girl and won national acclaim for the manner in which she put Cole Porter's song over. The role is sung in the Atlanta show by Mildred Fenton.

The story of "Leave It to Me" is a satire on ambassadors and the manner in which they are selected.

CITY WILL REPAVE THREE STREETS IF WPA GIVES NOD

Proposed $100,000 Project Will Include Forsyth, Walton and Broad in the Downtown Section.

Three important downtown thoroughfares will be repaved as a part of a $100,000 street improvement program to be launched by the city if WPA approves applications being drawn yesterday by Clarke Donaldson, city chief of construction.

The first application asks WPA assistance in replacing old wooden paving blocks on Forsyth street from Hunter to Peachtree streets, reconstruction of the approaches to the Forsyth street viaduct and sidewalk improvement.

Second in the list is the removal of the wooden blocks on Walton street from Peachtree street to Marietta street, and the third request, which was practically ready for submission to authorities, will undertake to replace wooden blocks on Broad street from Marietta to Peachtree streets.

The city has provided $25,000 for central street improvements, and it was indicated yesterday that other requests will be made as the year progresses. Under the WPA matching program, the city must provide 25 per cent of the cost of improvements with the WPA furnishing the remainder. Donaldson had not completed cost studies to a point where he could ascertain whether or not the three projects for which applications are being prepared would consume the $25,000 fund already available.

ARMED PAIR SEIZE CAR FROM WOMAN

Macon Matron Threatened With Gun; Released After Ride in Country.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 22.—(P)—Georgia police remained on watch tonight for two young men accused of seizing an automobile from a prominent young Macon matron after forcing her to ride with them several miles out of town.

Officers here said Mrs. W. A. Bottle, wife of the dean of Mercer University law school, reported one of the men roughly threatened her with a pistol, bruising her about the head and chest.

She had taken her daughter, Ann, to a kindergarten in the Vineville Methodist church, in a fashionable residential section, and was preparing to return home in a car borrowed from a neighbor, Mrs. Paul Jesse. She told police she had noticed two young, well-dressed strangers near the building as she first went in with her daughter, and that one entered the automobile when she returned from the schoolroom.

The second man, Mrs. Bottle reported, then approached the car and forced her to move out of the driver's seat. About two miles beyond Wesleyan college the pair released her, she said, and she telephoned from a roadside establishment for help.

Butler, a prominent attorney and former United States district attorney, said his wife suffered mostly from the excitement of the incident and slight bruises.

Soap Man Is Highest Paid Corporation Employee in U. S.

F. H. Countway's Salary and Bonus Totals $469,713, Income Tax Report Shows; Claudette Colbert, Sixth From Top, Drew Best Pay in Hollywood.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(P)—A soap company paid its president a salary and bonus of $469,713—more than $9,000 a week—in 1938, but tax experts figured he had to spend more than half of it on his income tax.

F. A. Countway of Lever Brothers Company in Massachusetts was shown to be the highest paid employee of a corporation in the United States in that year, as the Treasury made public a list of 400 persons in 23 states whose pay checks came to $75,000 or more.

Thomas J. Watson, head of International Business Machines Corporation, was paid $453,440, and four others received more than $300,000—E. G. Grace of Bethlehem Steel, George Washington Hill of American Tobacco, W. S. Knudsen of General Motors and Claudette Colbert of the movies. Experts figured that their income taxes ran up to 72 per cent. Here are the ten highest paid, with their compensation and approximate, theoretical tax bills, without accounting for exemptions, deductions or other income:

NAME—Compensation, Tax.
F. A. Countway	$469,713 $285,100
T. J. Watson	453,440 222,400
E. G. Grace	378,698 219,100
G. W. Hill	331,348 185,900
W. S. Knudsen	303,400 166,400
Claudette Colbert	301,944 164,300
Warner Baxter	279,807 153,400
Darryl F. Zanuck	265,000 140,200
Bill Crosby	260,000 136,800
S. P. Skouras	254,500 133,100

Miss Colbert and Skouras, of National Theaters, Amusement Company, led the Hollywood list, but due to an unexplained technicality the Treasury did not show payments by Loew's, Inc. and its subsidiary, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Although 1938 was not generally as good a business year as 1937, few important changes in compensation appeared. The biggest was a reduction from $500,000 to $100,000 for William Randolph Hearst from his vast publishing and other enterprises.

SPECIAL HEARING SET ON SCOTTSBORO CASE
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 22.—(P)—A special hearing on parole applications of five "Scottsboro assault case" convicts was announced by the Alabama Pardon and Parole Board tonight for February 13, but Alex Smith, chairman, said the special session was decided upon "in view of the large number of persons who wish to be heard in support of, or against, paroles for the negroes."

The applications previously had been set for hearing at the board's regular meeting date, February 13, but Alex Smith, chairman, said the special session was decided upon "in view of the large number of persons who wish to be heard in support of, or against, paroles for the negroes."

DR. E. H. JOHNSON RESIGNS AS DEAN

Will Devote Full Time To Teaching Economics at Emory.

Dr. Edgar Hutchinson Johnson, dean of the Emory University School of Business Administration since its organization, and oldest member of the faculty in years of continuous service, yesterday resigned from the deanship in order to devote full time to his duties as professor of economics.

In announcing acceptance of the resignation, President Harvey W. Cox exclaimed that Dean Johnson had desired for nearly two years to be relieved of administrative responsibilities. The executive committee of the board of trustees finally yielded to his request on condition that he retain the post until a successor could be selected.

Candler Lauds Record. Charles Howard Candler, president of the Emory board of trustees, made public resolutions expressing appreciation of Dr. Johnson's "long and distinguished service." He pointed out that Dr. Johnson is the only remaining dean who was on the administrative staff when Emory was moved to Atlanta in 1919.

Announcement of a successor to Dr. Johnson as dean will be made this spring, according to President Cox. In all probability, however, Dean Johnson will serve for the remainder of the academic year, he said.

A native of Palmetto, Ga., Dr. Johnson was educated in the public schools of his home town. He entered old Emory at Oxford in 1889 and while a student there received his first teaching experience. He taught during the summer in the rural schools of Appling county in order to help pay his tuition at college.

Graduated in 1891. Dr. Johnson was graduated from Emory College in 1891, the youngest member of his class and returned in 1895 as an instructor. He received his masters degree from the University of Chicago in 1899 and from Harvard in 1903. His doctorate was taken at Chicago in 1910.

He became vice president of Emory College in the same year and dean in 1915. He became dean of the business administration school in 1919. He was a member of a special Georgia Board of Commerce in 1918-19 and in 1929. He is also a trustee in the Atlanta School of Social Work.

Dr. Johnson was married in 1909 to Miss Susie McMichael, of Duena Vista, and has two children, Mrs. Mary Louise Davis, of Macon, and Edgar H. Johnson Jr., of Atlanta.

The movies paid salaries of $250,000 or more to Jack Benny and Roy Del Ruth, director, more than $150,000 to Leslie Howard, Loretta Young, Fred MacMurray, George Raft, Bob Burns, Joel McCrea, Charles Boyer and Samuel Goldwyn, and smaller six-figure salaries to Shirley Temple, Henry Fonda, Gary Cooper, John Barrymore, Marlene Dietrich, Frederic March and Tyrone Power. Shirley got $114,848.

Highest paid banker was Winthrop Aldrich of the Chase National Bank of New York at $177,600. Leaders in other fields included W. S. Paley, of Columbia Broadcasting Company, $171,849; Owen D. Young and Gerard Swope, of General Electric, each $245,447; Walter S. Gifford, American Telephone & Telegraph, $209,350; H. F. Sinclair Consolidated Oil, $200,550; C. W. DeVoe, F. W. Woolworth Company, $174,346; J. E. Brownlee, Frankfort Distilleries, $125,000; Joseph M. Pulitzer, Pulitzer Publishing Company, $180,461; Sheldon R. Coons, Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, $108,921.

The list was not, however, a "400" of the nation's wealthiest people, because it excluded income from dividends or other sources not called "compensation." Thus names like Henry Ford and John D. Rockefeller Jr. do not appear, at all.

The only stage celebrity in the list was Helen Hayes, who got $113,458 from Heron Productions, Inc.

Although 1938 was not generally as good a business year as 1937, few important changes in compensation appeared. The biggest was a reduction from $500,000 to $100,000 for William Randolph Hearst from his vast publishing and other enterprises.

Quads 'Sign' Contract With Milk Company

JASPER, Ala., Jan. 22.—(P)—Guardians of the quadruplets born to the poor-stricken Shert family last week tonight had only the health of the babies to worry about for the next two years.

A milk company had contracted to pay $35,000 to the quadruplets if they all lived for two years.

North Avenue Personality Queens Chosen On New Basis by School's Yearbook Staff

'Friendliness,' 'Co-operation' Rank With 'Intelligence' in Listing Girls' Assets.

There are, it seems, changing styles in feminine personality as well as in feminine clothes. Personality contests are judged on different qualities each year at North Avenue Presbyterian school.

The members of the staff of the school yearbook recently decided that charm, versatility, athletic ability, friendliness, intelligence and co-operation were the qualities to be considered in the 1940 personality contest at N. A. P. S.

The following winners of the contest, six personality queens, were announced yesterday. "Most Intelligent" is Miss May Lyons; "Most Co-operative," Miss Frances Adkins; "Most Charming," Miss Robin Taylor; "Most Friendly," Miss Eunice Hazel; "Most Versatile," Miss Mary Louise Davis; "Most Athletic," Miss Eleanor Kent.

All winners are seniors except Miss Kent, who is a junior. Miss Hazel also is president of her class.

The contestants were selected from a group of girls from each class. Two from each class were nominated for each title. By popular vote the student body named the six winners—six reasons for claiming more personality in 1940 at N. A. P. S. than ever before.

Students at the school point out that beauty is not the important feminine quality. For this reason, the personality qualities this year were based on the "intangibles," such as charm, friendliness, versatility.

And yet, although beauty was not essential, the winners proved to have plenty of "oomph."

NEW PLAN IS URGED TO AID DEFENDANTS

tion, but would prevent solicitation of cases on the part of ambulance-chasing lawyers and improve the procedure of the court.

How Plan Works.

Here, in general, is the way the plan will work.

As soon as a person is incarcerated on a felony charge, the jailer will give him a form to fill out. The prisoner will be asked to give the status of his case and whether he has a lawyer or is going to employ one.

He also will indicate whether he can pay a reasonable fee or any fee at all and give the source from which he expects to get his money.

These forms then will be turned over to the judges, who will have lists of the junior and senior counsel groups. The forms will be mailed out to junior counsel members in the order of their appearance on the list. This procedure will constitute appointment.

At the same time one of the senior members will be named to help each junior lawyer, the appointment being made according to the order in which the senior members appear on the list.

The judge may also give the junior counsel tips on the importance of the case and whether he should seek the advice of his senior or have him in court on the day of the trial. Junior members will receive the fee, if any, in each case. Seniors will receive no remuneration.

Evins said any member may become a member of the junior body by making an application. Whether he is accepted or rejected will be decided by a committee.

Committee members who worked out the plan met Saturday with superior court judges, who were heartily in favor of the new system. Evins said. He pointed out that past abuses cast no reflection whatsoever on the judges or the legal profession in general.

Evins said his committee was not absolutely sure that the proposed change is the answer to Fulton county's problem but asserted that while it was being tried out the bar association would conduct a survey of systems in other parts of the country and try to find the best solution for Fulton county.

The committee chairman explained that the whole burden on the representative of each criminal division had taken the Fulton county calendar to the jail and indicated by each case on the calendar whether the defendant had a lawyer. If he didn't, the court attach wrote "no lawyer" beside the defendant's name.

Come to Courtroom.

Later, it was pointed out, some lawyers would come to the courtroom, examine the calendar, and if they found a defendant listed as "no lawyer" they would scratch out this listing and insert their names. This would constitute their appointment to the case when it came up for trial.

Evins said his committee was named last November to study the practice of appointing lawyers for defendants without counsel in Fulton county and that its members were convinced changes should be made. Stephens Mitchell was named chairman of a general committee on the practice of criminal law in Fulton county.

Evins declared no official court order had been issued putting the system into effect, but that he was of the opinion no such official order was necessary since the judges had approved of the plan. "I want to make it clear," he said, "that we have no criticism of the judges, nor do we think the legal profession is guilty of a breach of ethics. However, the present system does open the door to abuses and we want to close that door."

Atlanta English Club Formed By Teachers in City, County

Organization Will Be Affiliated With National Council; Paul F. Farmer, Boys' High Faculty Member, Named President; Other Officers Are Elected.

With nary a "ain't," "I seen," "I taken" or a "his'n" to mar the flawless beauty of their table conversation, nearly 100 Atlanta and Fulton county teachers of English last night formed the Atlanta English Club, an organization to be affiliated with the National Council of Teachers of English.

Purpose of the organization, according to the charter drawn up by Miss Frank Taylor and Miss Adelaide Cunningham, co-founders of the group, is "to bring together instructors in English for the fellowship and the discussion of mutual interests which will lead to professional progress."

President of the new club is Paul F. Farmer, of Boys' High, who accepted the post with the statement that "I don't know nothin' about English nohow."

Other officers elected were Mrs. F. E. Garnett, of Bass, first vice president; Miss Rebecca Yeargan, of North Fulton, second vice president; Miss Emma May Laney, of Agnes Scott, third vice president; Miss Elsie Gibbs, Joe Brown, recording secretary; Miss Ellen Hinton, Holke Smith, corresponding secretary; and Edward McNair, Commercial High, treasurer.

Miss Cunningham, who was a delegate to the National Council meeting at New York, told the group that there was "a good chance" the 1941 meeting of the council would be held in Atlanta in response to the invitation issued by her.

Glenn S. Rainey, teacher of English at Georgia Tech, was principal speaker.

Proper Health Service Extension Termed Major Problem of State

(Editor's Note: Further light on the means by which prosperity in Georgia may be advanced is thrown in this, the first of two news releases of the Citizens' Fact Finding Movement dealing with health problems and their relation to economic betterment.)

"One of the great problems before Georgia, as before the whole nation, is the extension of adequate health services to all the people."

This declaration is contained in the summary of findings as to Georgia's problems of health, prepared for the Citizens' Fact Finding Movement by a group of experts under the direction of Dr. T. E. Abernethy, director of public health, assisted by Dr. Guy G. Lunsford and Dr. Edward R. Watson.

"Appalling economic and human losses will continue until this is done," the report insists. "Disease does not recognize social or economic distinctions, and no part of the population can feel secure unless health protection is extended to all."

Community Suffers. "Furthermore, the losses from ill health are, one way or another, passed on to every member of the community."

"Our people cannot have complete health security until their economic status is improved. The progress of this improvement will be slow, and in the meantime our ambition should be the working out of the best possible program for giving health care to all."

"The program would not only safeguard the community, but would give the individual security in the knowledge that—

"Water supplies are safe—

"His food is free from pollution—

"He can get needed medical and hospital care when he is ill—

"Epidemics cannot spread in his community—

"His working conditions will be safe and hygienic.

"A major problem before Georgia is one of obtaining revenue, so as to provide adequate health facilities sufficiently manned by trained personnel."

"This problem grows out of the low per capita wealth of our people, which in turn makes so great the need for provision of such health facilities."

"It cannot be too strongly stated that the financing of an adequate health program at this time requires extensive federal assistance."

Localities Must Help. "However, local governments cannot lay the whole burden on the federal government. Our cities, counties and state must share an equitable part of the cost."

In its factual study supporting these findings, the report learned that one-sixth of the total deaths from malaria in the United States during the past 10 years have occurred in Georgia.

Only one town in Georgia has a milk supply which is on the accredited list of the United States Public Health Service.

The cost of illness in the state is estimated to exceed $135,000,000 annually.

Inspection of school children in 98 counties during 1938-39 revealed that 72 per cent needed dental treatment.

The conclusion is reached: "Solution of the health problem is essential to the most effective attack on all other problems responsible for the social and economic ills that beset the state."

(The second article of this series will appear in the near future.)

LABOR BOARD BANS FORD'S PAMPHLETS

Claims Literature Disparaged Unions, Calls Free Speech 'Qualified Right.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(P)—Declaring that freedom of speech is a "qualified and not an absolute right," the National Labor Relations Board announced today that it had ordered the Ford Motor Company of Somerville, Mass., to cease distribution of literature having a "coercive" effect on employees.

Ford pamphlets distributed to employees contained "propaganda" which disparaged labor organizations, the board said, and thus interfered with the employees' right to organize.

The company also was ordered to cease "maintaining surveillance" of union meetings, but the board dismissed charges that the concern had discriminated against employees because they belonged to unions, and assaulted union men distributing union literature.

NATION REMEMBERS OSBORN'S BIRTHDAY

Former Michigan Governor, 80, Enjoys Georgia Winter.

POSSUM POKE, Ga., Jan. 22.—(P)—Today is the 80th birthday of Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, and he was "overwhelmed and flabbergasted," he said, at the ado made over it.

Famous in half-a-dozen fields other than statecraft, Osborn has wintered in Georgia for 34 years. He lives in a simple south Georgia woodland camp, known far and wide as "Possum Poke in Possum Lane."

The slender octogenarian arises at 3 a. m., shaves himself in the dark, and goes about the morning chores like a youngster. Among other things, he makes four fires and chops wood.

President Roosevelt led the nation in remembering Osborn's birthday, writing him a cordial letter. Edward R. Sweet, Muskegon, Mich., a hotel man, headed a committee on the birthday observance.

Beside being governor, he also has been a newspaper reporter, publisher, explorer, geologist, author, postmaster, game warden, psychologist, philosopher, war correspondent, dock wallper, philanthropist, marksman, hunter, baseball fan, reformer.

11 FORMER DEPUTIES DENIED PAY REBATE

Groups Assigned as Special Bailiffs Ruled Ineligible for Reimbursement.

Eleven former deputy sheriffs who were assigned as special bailiffs in Fulton county are not entitled to reimbursement for salary reductions below $200 a month during depression years, the county's legal department ruled yesterday.

Formal demand for reimbursement had been filed with the county commission by former Superior Judge G. H. Howard Sr.

The legal staff also turned down a request from Gus Howard Jr. for nine weeks' pay as a deputy sheriff under J. D. Bazemore, interim appointee following the death of Sheriff James L. Lowry.

The ruling held that, although Howard reported for duty, he did not make bond to the new appointee and therefore had no status as a county officer.

The opinion dealing with bailiffs' pay drew a distinction between bailiffs appointed by the superior court judges and those bailiffs assigned to the work by the sheriff. The ruling set out that under the law the fixing of salaries for other court bailiffs is a discretionary, not mandatory, function of the county commissioners.

The 11 bailiffs involved went out of office with Mr. Bazemore.

BELIEF ON RATES IS CALLED 'HOOEY' BY INDUSTRIALIST

Freight on Basic Commodities Said To Be Fair by Tennessean Who Sees 'Chaos' in Parity.

The old belief that the South has been held in economic penance by freight rate inequality is a delusion and "a lot of hooey," C. E. Widell, traffic manager of the Tennessee Products Corporation, here for the meeting today of the Southern States Industrial Council, said yesterday.

"On basic commodities," he declared, "the Southern industrialists have enjoyed a rate as low as or lower than that under which the Northern manufacturer ships his goods."

Being rapidly adjusted. "There has been a little higher rate on certain high-grade traffic," he pointed out, "but these 'class rates' are being adjusted rapidly through the cases which the Southern Governors' Conference has won before the Interstate Commerce Commission."

If the proposed plan of the I. C. C. to investigate all class rates east of the Rocky mountains is carried through, the rate parity throughout the whole territory is established, "chaos, industrially and otherwise," will result, he said.

Basic commodities on which the South enjoys an equal, or an advantageous freight rate now he listed as paper, chemicals, iron and steel, foundry products, coal, lumber, logs and forest products, brick, sand, lime and cement.

"Class commodities on which rate adjustments have been made through inter-territorial rate cases he named as cast iron, coke, some paper products, stoves, plumbing materials, marble and granite."

The South's freight rate ills are rapidly being cured, he said, through the medium of the inter-territorial rate cases, and a sweeping analysis which might result in rate parity throughout the territory would cause "chaos."

"A system of rate parity would tend to increase all rates," he declared, pointing out that differentials exist in all sections, and that industry in the past 100 years has developed in accordance with economic factors taking into consideration these rate differentials.

Basic Rate Rise Seen. Revision of all "class rates" would necessarily mean revision of the commodity rates on which the "class rates" are based, he pointed out, and the Southern industrialist could only expect his basic rates to be revised upward.

Mr. Widell presided at a transportation forum yesterday preceding the meeting here today of the Southern States Industrial Council.

The forum as a body went on record as opposing the investigation.

Zode Smith Lauded, Lampooned At 50th Anniversary Celebration

General Manager of Waterworks Praised for Accomplishments; Gramling Presents Guest With Watch, Rapp Gives Basket of Roses to Mrs. Smith.

Atlanta's champion water boy—Wilbur Zode Smith—was feted, caricatured, lauded and lampooned last night when scores of employees of the city waterworks department and families and friends gathered to pay homage to the waterworks boss, who has worked for the municipality for half a century.

For 50 years Zode Smith has been affiliated with the city government and has spent 30 years of that time as general manager of waterworks—converting clay-laden, murky waters of the Chattahoochee river into pure water.

And it was a golden anniversary in every sense of the word. Representing employees, Charlie Gramling, who himself has been connected with the department for 40 years, presented a beautiful gold watch; then along came William A. Rapp, oldest city employee, having been on the job for 54 years since April. Rapp was flower-bearer and gave Mrs. Smith a huge basket of roses; John Cooper, labeled the "town's most eligible bachelor," came forward with a picture of the old waterworks plant at Lakewood for "the boss"; tion, which, it was pointed out, would cost the railroads from $1,500,000 to $5,000,000 to prepare the data for the ICC and through Mr. Widell, as spokesman, said:

"The policy of southeastern carriers with respect to southern industry is in grave jeopardy and may be abandoned or superseded by the outcome of the pending class rate investigation."

"The results of that investigation will not be confined to class rates, but will inevitably result in revamping the present commodity rate structure with results of which industry in the south is apprehensive."

The council today will assemble 300 industrialists from throughout the South, representing capital investments running into the hundreds of millions.

Speakers will be Congressman Martin Dies, of Texas, chairman of the house committee which has recently reported on its investigation of subversive activities, who will talk on "Americanism," Congressman Robert Ramspeck, who will discuss "Federal Legislation," Dr. G. W. Dyer, of Vanderbilt University, who will talk on "Industrial Freedom," Ernest E. Norris, president of the Southern railway, who will talk on "Transportation," Lieutenant Colonel Philip Fleming, wage-hour administrator, who will talk on the work of his division; Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, who will talk on "Education," and E. J. McMillan, Knoxville, president of the council who will address the group on "Factors in the South's Industrial Development."

To Elect President.

G. C. Sheppard, Clark, La., lumberman, will be named to lead the organization for the coming year at a business session this morning.

Warning that "government ownership of the railroads is coming just as sure as the sun will set tonight, unless something is done to prevent it," Charles Barham, vice president of the N. C. & St. L. railroad, yesterday called upon the assembled industrialists to come to the aid of the railroads.

"That is, if it is still true that we are indispensable to your welfare," he qualified. "If we are obsolete, if we have been replaced by something better, then we can die and pass out of the picture without complaint."

"If we aren't, if we are still worth something to you, then help us fight against the influences that are slowly but surely strangling us."

Train Loses Business.

Mr. Barham pointed out that since the construction of a highway paralleling his line out of Nashville, his railroad carries less freight to all the towns along that line than it once carried to one little village of less than 200 population.

"We are building highways costing $40,500 a mile which could be built for $20,000 a mile if they were limited to the carrying of loads of not more than 6,000 pounds. If the trucks are going to have this extra money poured into highways for them, let them help foot the bill."

Quoting figures for 1937 he showed that in Tennessee railroads paid nearly two and a quarter million dollars in property taxes, the truck and bus lines paid less than sixteen thousand dollars, the barge lines paid only a little over a thousand dollars, and the air lines paid less than five hundred dollars.

MIDWEST STATES

PROTEST RATE RULING

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Five mid-western states petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission today to reconsider its recent decision in the north-south freight rate case. The states were Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin.

The commission ordered lower rates effective February 1 on a dozen manufactured articles moving from southern producing areas into the north.

"The record indicates that there are forces far greater than the differences in rate levels which are at work on the industrial development of the south and that despite any alleged rate handicaps, southern territory is in a prosperous and flourishing condition and growing at the expense of northern competitors and communities," the petition said.

RATE PLANK OPPOSED

BY ARKANSAS GOVERNOR

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Governor Carl E. Bailey expressed doubt today that it would be wise for the south to attempt to write a freight rate parity plank into the Democratic platform at the party's national convention this summer.

Commenting on a statement at Washington by Representative Hill, Democrat, Alabama, and Representative Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia, that such action would be "dangerous," probably futile, and if defeated in the convention would be a setback that might take years for the south to overcome, Bailey said:

"I am rather inclined to the view that the south should not try to make freight rate equalization a plank in the platform because we are in the minority."

bureau records to the highest in several days and is expected to return after the light snow this morning.

The Atlanta Gas Light Company yesterday announced a sufficient reserve to restore service after the cold wave had forced restrictions on gas consumption by many commercial customers.

A low of 10 degrees was reported in Fort Gaines, in southwest Georgia, with the Ogeechee river frozen over for the first time in 10 years near Midville.

257 Perish In Cold Wave.

Winty winds kept virtually the entire nation on the cold standard yesterday.

A recapitulation of deaths since waves of cold moved east and south from the northwest 10 days ago showed 257 had perished in 32 states. Deaths included 70 from exposure, 77 in traffic accidents, 81 in fires and 29 from other causes.

The heaviest snow in a decade swept across most of Texas. It ranged from 3 to 7 inches. It was the first fall in 10 years in San Antonio and Houston.

Clouds and wind saved most of Florida's citrus crop from destruction. Schools in Miami and West Palm Beach were closed because they had no heating systems.

Temperature rose during the day in most of the east, New England and the midwest—but ear muffs were still in vogue. Water-fall there since last Thursday measured 64 inches.

Subzero temperatures reported were Granger, Wyo., with —34; Rock Springs, Wyo., —26; Craig, Colo., —35, and Miles City, Mont., —16. Pacific coast temperatures were slightly below normal.

'Suicide' Gives Up After Three Shots in Head Fail

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Salvatore Moricone, 50, a janitor, went into the cellar of his apartment building today, determined to kill himself.

He placed a .32 caliber revolver to his temple, closed his eyes and pulled the trigger. He heard the shot but he did not die. He did not even fall.

He put the gun to his head and fired a second time. No result. He fired a third time and threw the gun away in disgust.

Then he walked upstairs and explained to his wife and two children that he had found a gun and that it had accidentally discharged as he was examining it. That, he said, was why he was bleeding.

Bellvue hospital doctors were amazed when he walked in and told them the real story—how three shots failed to kill him. X-rays showed the presence of two bullets and the possibility of a third.

Moricone was placed in the prison ward on a charge of illegally possessing a firearm. Four hours later he complained of a pain in the head.

The doctors placed him on the serious list.

How to tell if there's a "pack" in the price!

THERE'S a necessary difference between the advertised price of an automobile delivered at the factory, and the price you pay for it delivered here in your home town.

That difference covers a charge for transportation from the factory to you, based on rail rates, and also the dealer's charge for any extra equipment or accessories that you may elect to buy.

That's all there is to the difference. At least, that's all there should be. But sometimes an extra item that you can't quite put your finger on, gets included in that final delivered price.

The trade has a word for this extra item. It calls it a "pack." Usually it's tucked in there to allow for "dickering" with you on the used car you trade in. Sometimes it's simply plus profit.

In the public interest, and to enable you more accurately to judge the values we offer, we General Motors dealers are

Unneutral Pastors

This being a democracy, a land where freedom of speech and religion and press and assembly is every man's heritage, the declaration by a group of Protestant pastors and laymen, in New York, on the church's responsibility in the war crisis of the world becomes, automatically, nothing more nor less than the view of 33 individuals who happen to think alike.

It is possible other Protestant ministers do not view the wars now raging in Europe and Asia in the same light. The 33, however, made quite clear they are utterly unneutral in their personal opinions and demonstrated, at the same time, the basic truth of President Roosevelt's statement of last year that, although it was the duty of this country to remain officially neutral, individuals could not be expected to be unbiased in their minds and hearts.

Christians, according to the statement issued by the New York group on Sunday night, cannot remain neutral in the present conflicts. They then proceeded to give reasons to back this assertion. Reasons with which, undoubtedly, the vast majority of Americans, Christian or otherwise, will agree. The Gallup poll, remember, has revealed that only 2 per cent of Americans believe Germany is in the right in the war with the Allies and only 1 per cent are on the Russian side, in sympathy, in the war with Finland.

Admitting that a victory for the Allied powers, or a victory for China in the war with Japan, would not of itself assure the establishment of justice and stable peace, the New York churchmen nevertheless asserted that victory for Germany, Russia or Japan, on the other hand, "would inevitably preclude the justice, freedom of thought and worship, and international co-operation which are fundamental to a Christian world order."

How utterly right that statement is, is apparent to anyone who remembers the history of recent years or who is familiar with the manners of thought of the German Nazi, the Russian Communist or the Japanese militarist. All three give their faith only to the gospel of force, all three ignore the most solemn treaties or international agreements at will and all three have been guilty of gross persecution of the Christian church and its adherents.

To pretend to neutrality in a war forced upon the world by such powers as these is to accept a moral irresponsibility not consonant with the tenets of any Christian faith. For, if brute force is to determine the fate of nations and peoples, the gospel preached by the Prince of Peace must be forgotten. If man's most solemn pledges are to be ignored at will, whenever it appears immediately advantageous to do so, the whole edifice of human intercourse must topple to dishonored dust.

The armies of Britain and France, of China and of Finland may not be the armies of Jehovah, but it is at least fully demonstrated that the foes they face are the foes of everything just, everything decent, everything righteous.

Atlanta Civic Council

The movement to organize an "Atlanta Civic Council," made up of the numerous civic organizations from the wards and neighborhood communities of DeKalb and Fulton counties, contains the potentiality of an agency which could be immensely valuable to both counties and the cities within their borders.

There are many projects which, though actually located within the bounds of a comparatively small neighborhood unit, are of vital importance to everyone. To secure favorable action on this project, a civic body representing the best citizens of both counties would carry far greater weight with governmental authorities than one which represented a single ward, or section, only.

United action by such a council would, too, remove official fears that the action desired might not be in accord with the wishes of the voters of the entire city or county. Too often have worthy requests, coming from a restricted group of citizens, been sidetracked on the plea that those in authority are uncertain as to the views of other parts of the city.

There are other channels, many of them, through which a civic council such as planned could be of inestimable service. By combining forces of all groups and sections, it would prove a co-ordinating body through which unity of effort and elimination of duplication in campaigns for the entire community could be achieved.

It is, of course, to be hoped that the council, when created, will keep clear of political connections and involvements. Its slogan should be "for the best good of every citizen of Fulton and DeKalb," and it should always keep this objective in view.

Why Big Cruisers?

There is a lot of gentle poppycock floating around congress today to the effect the new big cruisers sought by the navy are an answer to the threat of the German pocket battleships. Roughly, the ships are to run 20,000 tons, which is only a few thousand tons smaller than many so-called battleships. They might vary from that figure by several thousand tons, since with a new class of warship it is almost impossible to set a definite figure.

But as for their being designed to "meet the threat of the pocket battleship," somebody is getting kidded. It was fairly well established in the Graf Spee incident that two eight-inch gun cruisers, of which the United States has nine in the Brooklyn class, can handle a pocket battleship, either with or without their plane complements—eight under wartime operations, 16 to the pair. These ships are almost as fast as destroyers and have twice the cruising range of the so-called pocket battleships.

If not designed to meet the threat of the pocket battleships, why are they needed? For the simple reason it has been fairly well established that Japan is building some of 15,000 tons, carrying 12-inch guns, designed to operate with small plane carriers as raiding detachments behind fleet battle lines, against convoys or in coastal raids, always effective in civilian demoralization in wartime.

They are needed to meet the threat of these vessels in speed and gun power, and to fill the need of a strategic concept which in recent years has gained great headway among the world's navies, but more particularly the American navy. This involves the use of striking forces comprising fast heavy vessels and equally fast plane carriers to supplement the slow but excellent main battle line. That is why the 45,000-ton Iowa and her sister ship, the New Jersey, probably will turn out to be much faster than the rest of the American battleships, and that is why the newest plane carrier and others on the ways are of cruiser speed.

Only by the exercise of specious fantasy can the proposed new cruiser class be termed an answer to the threat of the pocket battleships. They might be handy if one showed up, but right now England and France have the task of hunting them down, and after the war they'll be of little danger. But the big Japanese cruisers will still be there.

No Monopoly of Charm

It may be safely taken for granted that Thomas B. Paine, champion of Atlanta debutantes, would be the last to contend, gallant and courtly gentleman as he is, that said local deb have a monopoly on feminine charm. He knows, in fact, there is no such thing, actually, as an uncharming debutante. Some are more charming, more lovely, than others. That is all.

But anyone with experience to warrant opinion will admit that feminine pulchritude in Atlanta is of a quality far superior to the same beauty in other, less fortunate, cities. A famous artist recently said that, while Broadway could boast many beautiful girls, he would wager most of them came there from Peachtree street.

In fact, and in fairness, it should be observed that the individual responsible for the injection of Atlanta debdom into the controversy raging between the debutantes of Boston and the professional models of that same city, took unkind advantage of both factions in the home of the bean and the cod.

For, regardless of the ultimate victor in the battle over Bostonian charm and beauty, it is incontrovertible that the Atlanta girls, whether they be deb or models or store clerks or stenographers or industrial workers or housewives, so far surpass the belles of Boston an inter-city contest would be cruelly one-sided.

Let the girls of other cities, in any walk of life, engage in any manner of pulchritudinous rivalry. The girls of Atlanta can remain unmoved, unperturbed, unconcerned. They are in a beauty class by themselves.

They may not have a monopoly on charm, but they have all they need to be immune to rivalry from such a place as Boston.

"So clean is the blood of the native Samoan," says a traveler, "that a thigh slashed to the bone healed completely in three days." Like a cut budget.

The Chamberlain explanation of the Hore-Belisha dismissal has only added to the mystery. Maybe we should wait for another look at it on a clear day.

Though they're both at home, a Texas barber writes the wife a letter every day. This could be love, or one way to get a word in.

The Navy confesses its new destroyers are topheavy, but the case is far from hopeless. Maybe they'll leak, thus restoring the balance.

The first of the training ball players has arrived on Florida's sunbaked sands, and another winter is practically shot.

Editorial of the Day

FINLAND—MORAL RISK
(From The Memphis Commercial Appeal.)

Finland, judging from what goes on here and abroad, is generally regarded as a good moral risk when it comes to the extension of credit. Prime Minister Risto Ryti called attention to the fact the other day that Finland's national income is sinking rapidly because of the disruption of export trade caused by the Russian invasion. He said the Finns must have arms and munitions on a large scale from abroad and declared bluntly that "our exports are sufficient to pay only a part of the expenditure."

Prime Minister Ryti likewise said, however, that the Finns would meet any new obligations "as faithfully as we have done up to now," and that plain statement is enough. The United States and other nations are giving the Finns credits of one sort or another. After all, perhaps, a good name is more desirable than great riches.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

BORAH'S PRIVATE HERO WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Daniel Webster was William E. Borah's private hero. A big steel engraving of Webster hung on the wall of Borah's office, opposite the desk. It was odd to see the living man, still leonine, but a little tired, glance up as he talked towards the dead man's picture. The big, gloomy, book-lined room was dominated by that picture, in which old Webster's burning eyes glared out from the broad, crag-like face, as though in fury at the confinement of the high stock choking the neck.

Webster and Borah were, in some sense, the first and last of their tribe. In the early years of the republic, when the senate's sordid squabbles were recorded in the diary of the acidulous Maclay, the house was regarded as the more important body. The senate's pre-eminence was only achieved in the years of Webster and his fellow giants. That was the silver age of America, when Andrew Jackson licked Biddle and his bank, whose retainers Webster took; when one might outdo another in the "stank and shone, and shone and stank, like a rotten mackerel in the moonlight"; and when the great John Quincy Adams battled for the right, but wrote such poisonous letters to his colleagues that his family have not published them to this day. The giants, whose six-year terms allowed them to be gigantic, made the senate what it is.

From then until the present, the race of giants was not exhausted. Handsome, vain, brilliant Sumner, his mind a little strange after the terrible clubbing on the senate floor; John C. Calhoun, Douglas, the little giant; that later but gigantic figure of earth, Boies Penrose; Nelson Aldrich, John Sharp Williams—all of these walked in Washington with an air of command. It has long been a cliché to say the senate wasn't what it used to be. It is now almost a cliché to point out the cliché. And the fact remains that the cliché has some truth. Among the present senators, many are able and sincere. As a legislative body, the senate does its work well. But when one of two other old men have followed Borah, the senate will be without the commanding figures of the past.

SYMBOLS OF TIMES It is curious, yet true, that these commanding figures of the senate, so primadonnaish, so insistent on their individuality, have generally expressed the fundamental trend of their day. Webster, writing Nicholas Biddle to ask that his resignation be "refreshed," was a symbol of the transformation of an agricultural into a capitalist America. Calhoun and Sumner stood for the two sides in the great conflict, when the still agricultural fought that transformation and the dominance of the north. During the big business age, men like Penrose and Nelson Aldrich were the viceroys of big business in Washington.

Borah, the Progressive, the "Son of the Wild Jackass" came in when Theodore Roosevelt's trust-busting heralded big business for the first time since the Civil War. The milder forms of American progressivism have always looked backwards to a happier age, and Borah was appropriately nostalgic in his policies. Isolationism, trust busting and states rights—in all of these there is a longing for an earlier, simpler America, when national problems were less thorny, less fantastically complex. Sometimes of late, Borah almost seemed to shrink from reality, as when he told Cordell Hull last summer that he knew better than the State Department, that there would be no war.

"ANOTHER LEAGUE FIGHT" It was Borah, a freshman senator, who obtained the judiciary committee report for the income tax and direct primary amendments. It was Borah, also, who jockeyed the Harding administration into calling the Washington disarmament conference, the only practically fruitful international meeting of recent years. Yet people had a way of saying that Borah was in the line of opposition, for he remembered him best as the orator of the League fight, making his great speech on the day the treaty was beaten; or as the opponent of the court plan and revision of the neutrality act in these later years.

As he grew older he harked back more and more to the League fight time, recalling Lodge's softness towards mild reservations, telling little stories of his fellow bitter-enders, the wild, Medill McCormick and the tough strategist, Brandegee. Only last year he wanted someone to write the League fight's story. And when a big new struggle confronted him he would say, almost hopefully, "It will be another League fight; we will go out into the country and talk to the people." At the end he lived much in his memories; yet he will live long in the memories of others.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Getting a Line On the Folks.

It was, you may recall, mighty, mighty cold last Saturday morning.

But the old home was warm. The furnace was doing its duty and there was a supplemental fire in the front living room.

He comes to our door every morning, bringing a grin and a laugh and a cheeriness with him. He brings, too, a big metal basket full of bread and pies and cookies and cakes. Regular morning call, is "Hey, ma! Bread man's here. Whadya want?"

Summertime he generally chats with us, a minute or so, on the front porch. But, winters, when we are inside, he rings the bell and then, if it's cold, we tell him to step inside. For his sake and our own, too. Don't want the door open, letting in the cold while lady of the house decides which bakery products she needs.

So, Saturday, as said, being mighty chilly, he came inside. Then we invited him to stand close by the fire and get warm, for a minute or two. He said he had four pairs of socks on, but nevertheless his feet were cold. Of course, he laughed when he said it. That's the kind of good-natured guy he is.

When he started to leave, he remarked that he knew just every house on his route where he'd be invited to get warm. "And believe you me," he added, "I'm going to stop at every one of them this morning. Don't care how late it makes me." He proceeded to give names and street locations of various folks who would invite him inside. It was quite a revelation into character of some of the folks we know.

Mrs. Blank Won't, Though.

He named quite a number who would, or wouldn't, extend the warm-up invitation. And, among them, was the name of a friend of ours who is just about the kindest and most considerate of people. He listed her among the "won'ts" and we were surprised.

"Sicks," he said, "her door will open just in that wide." He illustrated with his hands. "Barely enough to get a loaf of bread through. Her cook comes to the door and always opens it no more than a crack."

You'd think, wouldn't you, that on a morning like Saturday a man on a job like this bread man would have reason to complain, if anyone did. A little grouching would be excusable in his case. But not he.

"You know I'm just about the luckiest guy in town," he said. "I was just a thinkin', this morning, I oughter buy me some warm gloves. I can keep my left hand in my pocket, but have to carry the basket with my right hand and, without a glove, it was gettin' awful cold."

"Then, just around the corner here, what happens to me? I found a nice, warm woolen glove somebody had lost, right in the street. For the right hand, too. Believe you me, I'm lucky."

He displayed the glove, one of those feminine affairs with a different color for each finger. But warm.

And so, the bread man felt himself the luckiest guy in town, the while his ears and nose turned red with cold and even four pairs of socks failed to keep his feet comfortable.

I Nearly Got Mad.

A little later Saturday morning, I was nearly got all mad myself. It was with the motorman and conductor of a North Decatur streetcar. It was this way.

Having decided to travel to town by streetcar, another member of the family drove me to the end of the carline, at the courthouse square corner of McDonough street, in Decatur. There was a streetcar waiting there. And my idea was to jump from the family bus into that car and hope to find it reasonably warm.

But the doors, front and rear, were tight closed. Tried, in vain, to open them by pushing down. And pulling out, on the step. There were other folks, men, women and younger folks, waiting in the outside cold, too.

It developed the motorman and conductor were in a really warm spot, a cafe. Didn't blame 'em for that, if the time schedule allowed it. I'd try and get warm, in like circumstances, myself. But it did seem, to me, they should have left one door of the street car open so all who waited, including the gals with those poor legs unprotected save for three-thread hose, could get out of the wind, at least.

As said, I nearly got mad. Then thought of our cheerful bread man and his one glove, his cold feet and his cold-red nose and ears and decided we could all put up with a little inconvenience. And, at the same time, hope the streetcar men were nice and warm inside that restaurant.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Saturday, January 23, 1915: "Washington, Jan. 22.—A national system of land mortgage banks to enable farmers to obtain capital for stocking and improving partly-paid-for farms was advocated in the house today by Representative Howard, of Georgia."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Thursday, January 23, 1890: "The Massachusetts Press Association thinks of coming to Georgia soon on a tour of inspection."

Just a Mess.

The war ministry has published the daily ration allowance of French soldiers.

Here is the ordinary day's fare for a man at the front: Bread, 26 ounces (or 25 ounces of biscuits or 18 ounces of oatmeal bread). Meat, fresh or chilled, 14 ounces (or 10 ounces of canned meat). Dried vegetables, or rice, three to four ounces. Salt, two-thirds of an ounce.

Sugar, one and three-quarters ounces. Unground coffee, more than one ounce. Wine, nearly two

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Strange NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—William Green, the illustrious president of the American Federation of Labor, has made a strange reply to prove that the boss of two of his most powerful international unions are not criminals of the most vicious type. These two are Willie Bioff, the dictator of the theatrical and movie trades, and George Scalse, president of the Building Service Employees' International Union. They got their training for the post of bargaining agent by serving as such for prostitutes and they are known to the police of their respective home towns—Chicago and Brooklyn—as racketeers and alumnus of the old Capone mob of terrorists.

Mr. Green knows all about them and yet when proof is presented to the rank and file of the A. F. of L. and the general public of the character of his two respective colleagues in the higher councils of the A. F. of L., he resorts to insinuation, but I won't hold out for a direct charge. I challenge him on the insinuation to produce evidence that I have been hired by enemies of labor to smear the movement. Under what bridge at what time of what night did what enemies of labor pay me how much to smear the movement, and if Mr. Green has the slightest evidence to support his insinuation why is he neglecting his duty to bat my ears down? He is paid to protect labor from its enemies, isn't he?

Service The truth is that I have done a service for organized labor in exposing vicious conditions in the union racket. Mr. Green knows that, revolting as these disclosures are, they are only a suggestion of the whole state of affairs, and he has become jumpy waiting for me to drop that other shoe. As to that I will say I am a centipede. I can keep on dropping shoes until Mr. Green gives some evidence of a sense of responsibility to the dues-paying workers and the public and a determination to clean the criminals out of the American Federation of Labor or until the A. F. of L. kicks him out and puts in some man who can and will.

That old stall of Mr. Green's that the constitution of the A. F. of L. forbids interference with the autonomy of the subsidiary unions has been used to cover the development in the United States of a system of brigandage and extortion closely akin to the Italian mafia under which career men of the crime business prey on employees as well as employers. They form conspiracies with employers to limit competition, and they rob the union members through extortionate dues, assessments and initiation fees and the practice of job-selling. The parent body enjoys a big, if not necessarily fine, reputation and has great political influence, and the charters which it issues thus can become, and in many cases are, no better than licenses to rob and oppress. Embezzlement is by no means rare, but democracy is, and the autonomy gag is used by the parent organization to shirk the unpleasant duty of fighting notorious racketeers in the subsidiary unions. It is used also to avoid the plain duty of any labor organization to protect individual workmen from cruel persecution by crooked officials of their locals or internationals as when a man appeals to Mr. Green's office and is told that the national body can't interfere with the judgment of the subsidiary bodies.

Mr. Green Mr. Green called on the national, state and local authorities to enforce the public laws against union officials who abuse their power, knowing, however, that union members are forbidden to appeal to the public authorities except in desperation, that anyone who does appeal to them will be smeared as a disrupter, scab, rat and fink, that the public authorities simply can't take over in detail the police duties of the unions, and that in many cases in such situations the victim runs the risk of being waylaid by murderers and beaten to death with a ball-bat. There are many precedents for that.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE GENTLEMAN FROM GRASSY POINT It will be recalled that before Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt was catapulted into the national political scene in 1931, a gentleman from Grassy Point, N. Y., went on tour.

This was Mr. James A. Farley. He went about. He shook hands. He asked a question here and there. He did, for the most part, however, an excellent job of listening.

True enough, Mr. Roosevelt had been advanced here and there as a presidential possibility. But it was not until Mr. Farley returned from his tour that Mr. Roosevelt was catapulted, so to speak, into the spotlight—and kept there.

Mr. Farley again is on tour. He is touring the south and south-east. He is dedicating post offices, assisting in the ceremonies attendant on the retirement of a faithful employee, and making an occasional talk.

He was in our town yesterday afternoon. On Wednesday he will speak in North Carolina on the subject of "Industry and Agriculture at the Gateway of the New Era."

Without any information as to what Farley will say in that speech, it is well to recall he never once has retreated an inch from the progressive and liberal policies of the Democratic administration. It may be expected that he will speak practically as befits him. He always has been, in business and in politics, a practical person.

A GREAT AMERICAN

Jim Farley is a great American. In fact, I think the liberals, who have gone off chasing rainbows and who go along shouting in the wake of some impractical theorist, miss the boat by not joining up with Farley.

Farley never has quit the liberal policies of the New Deal. Time after time he has spoken out for them and warned all those who would desert that the party cannot be successful if it deserts the cause of the people.

That might have some ideas which would put into effect new plans to meet emergencies may very well be true.

After all, we have spent billions on our plan to abolish unemployment, yet the problem is as great as ever and we have enjoyed, for some months, a mild industrial boom.

After all, Secretary Wallace has labored long, and sincerely, in behalf of the farmers but congress never helps out by abolishing the tariffs which make impossible any real rehabilitation of the farm; and his markets.

A new set of plans might not be a bad idea. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt himself is looking about for a new set of blue prints for the economy of the nation.

AN EXCELLENT MAN

As far as I am concerned, Jim Farley would make an excellent president.

On occasion I have suggested this to some of those who are following in the thin dust which their prophets have been able to stir.

"Why Farley," they all but shriek, "is a politician."

This is true. There may be one as good. If so it is Mr. Roosevelt himself.

I like honest politicians because this form of government cannot be conducted by any save politicians. We have so few who are honest. An honest politician is a practical politician. In the bright lexicon of the idealist there is no such word as compromise. But the honest politician must make progress through compromise. Mr. Farley is practical. Government would be all right in his hands. Not even the most rabid of prohibitionists could object to Jim Farley. In all his life he never took a drink of booze.

Being practical, I doubt if Mr. Farley could win the nomination. I rather imagine Mr. Garner will, within a short time, withdraw. There remain Cordell Hull and Jim Farley.

It will be interesting to see what develops from this pleasant tour by Mr. Farley.

AN AMERICAN STORY

His story is an American story. He came up the hard way. He played baseball; took a commercial course; began as a bookkeeper; developed his own business, and got into ward politics.

He was town clerk of Stony Point, New York. He went to the legislature. He was a member of the state athletic commission and later its chairman. He joined the Knights of Columbus, the Elks, the Red Men. He became a member of the state Democratic committee and now is chairman of the national committee. He has been a successful postmaster general.

He has never made the mistake of losing touch with the people. He wants to know what they say, how they feel and what they think.

Yes, the tour will be of interest.

The Fiercest Tiger Can Be Hurt,

But It Never Stops

Being Dangerous

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

The failure of the invading troops in Finland has made it fashionable to sneer at Russia, but the world is making a sad mistake to underestimate Stalin.

He is absolute master of a nation greater than ours. It is an incredibly vast land, extending from ocean to ocean, from arctic ice in the north to tropical heat in the south, and within its borders are more than one hundred distinct peoples who have no common language.

In a few years, despite ignorance, indifference, sabotage and open rebellion, Stalin has subdued these 170,000,000 people and changed Russia from an illiterate, primitive agricultural land to a land of schools and factories and machines.

He has done it by methods that horrified the world; yet if you grant him premise, everything he has done is wholly logical.

He believes in Communism—not the dictionary kind, but the totalitarian system of state Socialism he has established. And as the zealous Christian believes in saving mankind by evangelizing his own land and sending missionaries to teach the Gospel in all the earth, so he believes he is serving mankind by forcing his system upon his own people and sending agents to establish it in all nations.

EX-GRAND JURORS ORGANIZE TO PUSH PRESENTMENTS

Thomas C. Law Elected President; 125 Members Indorse One-Government League in Principle

Members of the past 12 grand juries of Fulton county last night organized themselves into an association, one objective of which will be "to prevent accumulation of presentments," elected Thomas C. Law chairman, and indorse "in principle" the One-Government League.

The action came after the former jurymen heard W. Eugene Harrington, chairman of the One-Government League, outline many of the recommendations of the Reed report and explain the league's plans for consolidating city and county governments.

Further objectives of the ex-grand jurymen's association will be outlining by an executive committee to be composed of the association chairman and the foremen of the past 12 juries. Law said a meeting of this committee would be held later but declared that one of the recognized aims of the organization would be to see that something is done about grand jury presentments.

125 Attend.
Approximately 125 members of the 12 juries as well as members of the present January-February jury were present. Each jury was represented by at least five members. The session lasted for nearly three hours. The entire body, including members of the present grand jury, approved the One-Government League "in principle."

Law said that as each grand jury is dissolved its members will be eligible for the new association.

Attacks "Petty Politics."

Harrington first attacked the city governmental set-up, citing the existence of what he termed "petty politics" and the lack of an administrative head. He analyzed the county government in a similar manner, pointing to the same general "evils." He ended up by outlining the objectives of the league as they are now being promoted and placed this challenging question before the ex-jurymen: "Are you willing to do the job?"

Harrington took frequent direct quotations from the Reed report and explained that his entire address was based on the recommendations as outlined in that report.

and rail crews at Lwow gave rise to rumors here last week of a new territorial division of Poland between the Reich and the Soviet, with Germany occupying a section up to the Rumanian frontier. Officials here said these reports were groundless and that the new agreement affected only the railway and the technical supervision of the oil fields.

The German technical crews are being brought in, it was reported, with a view to increasing production of oil, a raw material which Germany needs to drive her war machine.

Allies Accused Of Balkan Aims

MOSCOW, Jan. 22.—(P)—The Soviet Russian army organ, Red Star, today accused Britain and France of planning to "encircle Germany's Siegfried Line" by a flanking movement through the Balkans.

The article said there were large French-British troop concentrations in Palestine, Syria and Egypt in the Near East. Red Star said there was significance in the fact that Britain and France had not given guarantees to Bulgaria and Hungary, as they did to Rumania.

Nazis Coming, Reds Warn

HELSINKI, Jan. 22.—(P)—To the accompaniment of loudspeaker broadcasts that the Germans were coming and "would kill all Finns," Russia's Red army was reported in military dispatches today to have lost 900 troops in a fruitless attempt to crack Finland's Mannerheim line.

(Nazis in Berlin immediately replied that Germany's position remained "friendly toward Russia" because of the Russian cause but strictly that of an observer.)

Heavy fighting was reported northeast of Lake Ladoga in the direction of Kaitila, Kollantjoki and Ilomantsi with the Russians leaving more than 600 dead on the battlefields. The Red army appeared ready for a new effort after concentrating new supplies and munitions.

The continued cold brought a new problem for the Finns by freezing the Gulf of Finland from Estonia to Finland, raising the possibility that Russian troops might chance an attack across the ice from Estonian bases.

Finns said they were prepared to meet such a Russian thrust, however, as the coast in many

A foreign office communique said Tani told Sir Robert that Japan adhered to the principle that only those "embodied in the armed forces" of a belligerent should be yielded to a demanding belligerent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(P)—Secretary Morgenthau indicated today that, at President Roosevelt's request, he was co-ordinating Allied and American army and navy airplane purchasing in this country. This was taken to mean that American and foreign airplane orders were being cleared through him to prevent conflicts which

Sea Loss Hits Million Tons

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(P)—The world's merchant shipping losses since the start of the war were pushed above the million-ton mark by a heavy week-end toll. Lloyd's List and Shipping Gazette reported today.

Lloyd's said that 268 ships of 18 nations, aggregating 1,003,851 tons, had gone to the bottom to date through war action collision or grounding attributed to war conditions.

Heaviest sufferer among the belligerent nations was Britain, whose losses include 131 merchant vessels totaling 493,834 tons, the report said. The publication declared France had lost 11 ships totaling 55,581 tons; Germany 24 ships totaling 140,595 tons, and Poland one ship of 14,294 tons. Neutrals have lost 101 ships aggregating 289,547 tons.

Maisky Expected To Return Home

LONDON, Jan. 23.—(Tuesday) (P)—Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky soon will return to Moscow, a reliable source said early today. It was recalled here that Britain's ambassador to Moscow, Sir William Seeds, recently returned to London for a "vacation."

The reasons for Maisky's going home were not explained. He is an expert on affairs of Finland, having been Soviet minister at Helsinki from 1929 to 1932.

Doctors Say KEEP BOWELS OPEN During Cold Epidemics

When colds are all around you, don't let weak spots in your defense arise due to constipation. "Keep Regular," many physicians advise. For constipation and its strength-sapping symptoms; headache, biliousness, sluggishness, dizziness, sour stomach, use a laxative that acts thoroughly but not harshly. An ideal one is Dr. Hitchcock's All-Vegetable Laxative Powder, which acts thoroughly, but usually with gentleness when taken as directed. It contains pleasant-tasting aromatics, carminatives and what is known by medical authorities as a gastro-intestinal tonic-laxative. It helps tone sluggish bowel muscles. Dr. Hitchcock's Laxative Powder costs less than 1c a dose. Get it at any drug counter. 10c, 25c. (adv.)

Crackers Lose Chance To Get Al Rubeling From Athletics

All in the Game

—by Jack Troy

As he stood on the first tee preparing to drive off down the sunny fairway at East Lake, the reporter asked Bob Jones, "What are you shooting these days?"

"Mostly a 20-gauge gun," replied Mr. Jones. "No, I'll take that back. I'm not even shooting a gun very much."

Then the old grand slam champion brought the club head back and hit the ball almost as far as you could see—and I'm not near-sighted—down the middle.

Bob Jones is really getting ready to shoot some golf when the Masters' tourney comes around again at Augusta.

The old master has, in a sense, gone back to school. Young Harold Sargent, assistant to his dad at East Lake, is watching one particular part of Bob Jones' game.

He is watching delaying of cocking the wrists, so as to give a larger arc and fuller leverage, on the swing. When a golfer breaks his wrists too quickly on the backswing, it brings on complications. It simply throws his game out of gear.

The exclusive Constitution picture on this page shows young Sargent watching Bob Jones at the top of his swing. It is the old Jones' form.

It was only necessary to see Jones hit one ball yesterday to realize he is more serious about his game than he has been in a long time. Preceding Bob off the tee were Alfred Sargent, Hal Sargent and Charlie Dannals. All three hit fine drives and Jones capped the climax with a fourth one.

As they started away, Jones asked Dannals if he intended to shoot a 65 at them. Dannals toured the Capital City course in such figures a week ago. Dannals professed innocence, reminding Jones that he had shot but few 65s in his entire life.

A lot of folks would consider a lifetime of golfing complete should they shoot one 65 on a course like Capital City or East Lake. And I do mean, of course, for 18 holes.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

This business of getting a smooth, even flow on the backswing always has been one of the secrets of golfing success, but for a long time no one realized it.

That is to say, they knew that one type of swing was right, another wrong, but they couldn't put their finger on exactly what it was until George Sargent came along with his machine which weighs the angle of the swing.

Then it was realized that the wrists must be turned over on the backswing in order to describe a fuller arc. In other words, in starting the backswing if you see the back of the right hand in looking down the arm the form is according to the better standards of golf.

In fact, if you don't hold the wrist in that manner, there won't be much of an arc to the backswing and the result will be something awful to behold.

ALFRED PAYS A VISIT.

Alfred Sargent, one of the professional sons of George Sargent, is spending a seven-week visit here. Alfred will be in charge of the Hinsdale golf club, Chicago, when it opens the first of April.

Incidentally, the Hinsdale club is the old club of Doc Irwin, who was president.

During his visit, Alfred is playing considerable golf on the East Lake course just as a matter of keeping his hand in the game, so to speak.

POSS GIVES A BARBECUE.

Poss is giving his annual barbecue at Athens tonight, honoring the Georgia football team, and it will be necessary to be present.

There is something about the barbecues given by Mr. Poss which annually attract those who have been before.

In the past they have been held at his place outside of Athens, but this time the banquet spread will be in the Legion hut down town. But no one ever questioned locations. Only thing asked was would Poss be in charge.

Old friend of Major Owen Summers of Fort Mac . . . Gus talked a little about boxing a kangaroo . . . "They make fine pets, but in the ring they're wild babies. . . . Once got a broken jaw boxing one. . . . Been knocked out several times. . . . They balance on their tails and sock you with their hind feet. . . . Once you knock one of them out, they're no good for several days. . . . And I might add you don't feel any too good after one of them knocks you out." . . . Ferdinand feels a lot better about things now. . . . He has just seen a newsreel at the Rialto and he's in the movies with Mayor Bill Hartsfield and Captain Jack Malcolm. . . . Too bad Chief Hornsby could not have been in the picture. . . . He'd feel entirely safe then. . . . Ken Stambaugh, covering the Touchdown Club's bowl function, with a newsreel camera, did a neat indoor job. . . . L. C. (Bull) Warren—the "Bull" is a hangover from old Gordon athletic days—is being chided a bit by friends these days because of an unusual incident that happened in Chattanooga recently. . . . An old friend of Gordon days asked "Bull" for his autograph on a basketball to give to his boy. . . . And Bull gladly gave it on a $14 ball. . . . Now, his friends are asking him if he'd mind giving them an autograph on a blank check or even a refrigerator. . . . Dutch Dehnert, who originated the pivot play in basketball, still is irked that the rule makers have limited a player's time in the circle. . . . But the years are mellowing the Dutchman. . . . He enjoys running the Celtics from the bench. . . . "The old legs won't respond forever," he said the other day. . . . Fine rule Judge Landis has put over prohibiting the signing of young players under the impression they are to receive tryouts with a major league club and then find themselves sidetracked to Chittling Switch. . . . Lamar Murphy, for instance, probably had an idea he'd be with the Yankees when they signed him. . . . And certainly George McQuinn had hopes one day of being a Yankee. . . . But he never got farther than Newark. . . . Incidentally McQuinn, who is visiting here, has a handsome diamond medal given him as a member of the American league all-star team. . . . He didn't play in the game, but shared the bench with Jimmy Foxx while Hank Greenberg occupied first base. . . . McQuinn established an American league record for consecutive hitting in 1938. . . . He hit safely in 34 consecutive games. . . . Had McQuinn been given the chance he deserved in major league ball he'd be about $40,000 richer today. . . . The unpredictable Yellow Jackets are shaping up as a potent conference tournament contender. . . . Paul Blackard, Southern league umpire, says the greatest thrill he ever got was when Jimmy Sanders went up to Union City, Tenn., to give him a job in the Southern league.

Bob Jones, who is playing some of the best golf he has played in many years, is taking a tip or two from a tutor—young Harold Sargent, son of East Lake's George Sargent. Harold is watching as Jones prepares to drive from No. 1. (See 'All in the Game'.)

The Sportlight

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

THE LITTLE GIANTS.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Who were the little giants of sport, the smaller fellows who have outmatched brawn and bulk with brains and speed?

This argument came up in the wake of 140-pound Ben Hogan's tremendous hitting in golf. Lou Little, Harry Stuhldreher, Steve Owen, Curly Lambeau, head man of the Packers, Dick Hanley, Cecil Isbell and many others were in the midst of the debate. Not so much for golf—but for other sports. For example, football.

In football the first of the "little giants" was Frank Hinkey, of Yale, "the disembodied spirit," who at 150 pounds was tearing 180 and 190-pound backs apart with his cyclonic tackles. Ask any survivor of Harvard's "faraway and long ago" team, around the early '90s.

Hinkey practically exploded when he hit you—and so did the party of the second part—meaning the ball carrier.

"I can give you three others," Lou Little, of Columbia, said. "Don't overlook Albie Booth, of Yale; Cotton Warburton, of Southern California; and Dave O'Brien, of Texas Christian. They were all 145 or 150 pounds of pure nitroglycerine."

THE HARDEST.

In one way young Dave O'Brien, of T. C. U. and the Philadelphia Eagles, gets the main sprig of laurel.

I talked with Texas Davey just before the Packers-All-Star game. Short in stature, and none too stocky, weighing around 148 or 150 pounds, he looked even smaller outlined against the two sets of mastodons and mammoths on each side—Musso at 260, Baby Ray at 245 and others at 240 or perhaps 230. He is a needle in football's haystack. Yet Dave O'Brien has never had time taken out in three hard years at T. C. U. and this last year, his first as a pro with the Eagles.

As a forward passer they have bounced his head and slender body off the ground more than 200 times, but he has always bounced back with a grin. He has been the rubber ball of the gridiron. And, don't forget, he can split a line as well as throw a pass.

"For one thing," O'Brien tells me, "I know how to protect myself. I give with the charge when they hit me. I remain relaxed."

And maybe I was born to take it." Davey has certainly taken his share, doubled and redoubled. I should say that O'Brien and Hinkey were the masterpieces of football durability. They were the real iron men—outweighed by 50 to 100 pounds. That's quite a match of weight to give away.

BASEBALL'S SHARE.

Baseball has also known its share of these magnificent midgits.

What about Johnny Evers, the "Human Splinter"? Evers was a stout 118-pounder in his early Cub days, but Johnny was a 200-pound thorn in the side of John McGraw and his Giants.

And there was Rabbit Maranville, of the Cubs and Braves, another chunk of gun cotton, who was about the size of a baseball bat.

And there was Dicky Kerr, of the White Sox, one of the few small pitchers who could make the grade.

To keep from being waylaid and assaulted I'll also give you Wee Willie Keeler from a lost decade, who was smart enough to "hit 'em where they ain't." I saw Keeler play 40 years ago and I still think he stands out as the most scientific hitter of all time. An old-timer by the name of Denton Tecumseh (Cy) Young agrees with me.

"Willie was one you couldn't fool," Cy says. And Cy fooled most of them.

IN BOXING.

Who was the all-time top of the little fellows in boxing?

There was Jimmy Wilde, "The Great Atom," a 105-pound flyweight who for years whipped men who were 15 to 25 pounds heavier. I saw Wilde near the sunset of his career when he, Bob Ed-

PURPLE BOXERS TO OPEN CARD

Boys' High's boxing team composed mostly of seniors will open its 1940 schedule at 7:30 o'clock Friday night in the Henry Grady gymnasium with Savannah High opponents.

More than a score of ambitious youngsters have been working out several weeks under the direction of Coach Draper, preparing for a series of some six or seven meets.

Savannah has one of the best prep boxing teams in the state, and should give the Purples one of their best matches of the year.

There will be nine three-round bouts on the program, starting in the 110-pound class and ending with the light heavyweights.

Following Friday's bouts, Boys' High will meet G. M. A. Charlotte High, Decatur and Tech High. The Purples also expect to enter a couple of boxing tournaments in addition to their regular schedule.

Some of those included on Friday's program include Gene Young, Bog McCormick, Bob Hargett, Lewis Hargrove, Jimmy Branch, Dan Connors, Warren Cosby, Ted O'Callahan and H. Herzberg.

Diz Again Returns Unsigned Contract

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—(P)—Owner Phil Wrigley denied today he had any holdout problems with his Chicago Cubs.

"Some of the boys are asking for more money, but I've always encouraged discussions over salary problems," explained the Cub owner. "I wouldn't call them holdouts at all."

He said Dizzy Dean's contract returned again today unsigned, accompanied by a letter from the sore-arm pitcher.

"Dean didn't say how much he wanted but said he thought he was worth more than we offered," Wrigley added, "and gave several reasons for his views. I don't know what I'll do about it yet. I haven't made up my mind."

Rucker Catches Deer In Wild Mexico Hunt

Former Cracker Outruns Robinson to Get Injured Deer—The First He Ever Saw.

By IRVIN McBRAYER.

Many tales have been told about the blinding speed of Johnny Rucker, who was sold to the New York Giants last year by the Crackers, but when this one pops out you will say it ain't so.

Rucker and Onnie Robinson, young Atlanta right-hander, took a trip down to Old Mexico to do a little hunting. John, it seems, had never seen a wild deer and as luck would have it, after the hunt was well under way he spotted one about 300 yards distant.

Onnie witnessed the scene and testified to the fact that it was John's first view of a wild deer.

"Rucker was plainly nervous, but he took careful aim at the deer which was walking slowly toward us," relates Robinson. "The shot hit the deer in the head but failed to kill him. I started on a run to get him before he could get away, but Rucker breezed past me like a passenger train in a race with a turtle."

Rucker reached the stricken deer before I got half way and had it down when I reached the scene. That boy showed me that he could run without his spikes." So Mr. Rucker, the $40,000 outfielder, showed the boys a burst of unconscious speed. He wasn't going to let his first deer get away, even if he did have to run it down.

BAGS LIMIT. Onnie and John's party had a big trip, bagging the limit. They captured a Mexican lion alive and got their quota of quail.

The boys framed up on the quail. One would shoot to the right in a covey and the other two would take the middle and left, respectively.

"I made my kill once and was waiting for the dog to bring the quail in," said Onnie, "but he was looking down at it seemingly in disgust. We waded over to the spot where the bird had fallen and it was only a sparrow."

A total of 44 deer were bagged by the 533 hunters participating in the Black Warrior National Forest deer hunt sponsored jointly by the state conservation department in Montgomery, Ala., and the national park service.

LOSS OF MCCOY AND BILL NAGEL BOOST FOR RUBEL

Mann Says Rubeling Has Great Chance With Connie Mack.

By JACK TROY.

Any idea the Crackers might have had of getting Al Rubeling back from the Athletics to play second base is out of the question now.

Somehow, the matter has escaped local notice, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that the free agency of Benny McCoy—the real McCoy—has given Rubeling a couple of shots at the Athletic infield and he is certain to play one of the two positions.

Connie Mack has traded Bill Nagel, who played third base last year, and now with McCoy gone, there are two spots open on the infield—and the Rube is good at either of them.

The opinion previously had been expressed that the Crackers might have a chance of getting Rubeling back for second base, but there's no chance now.

As a matter of fact, President Earl Mann said yesterday, "I haven't had any doubt in my mind that Rubeling would stick up there, anyway."

"The boy only needs a little consideration from his manager the first part of the season. He is a real ball player and a power hitter of the first rank. If they give him a little time he'll be a star," Mann declared.

And so the Crackers must look elsewhere for a second baseman in the event a boy like Connie Ryan, former L. S. U. star, fails to come through.

Dot Kirby Qualifies With an 85

Plays Garman Today; Miley, Callender Tie for Medal Honors.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

PUNTA GORDA COUNTRY CLUB, Jan. 22.—The weather seems to be the topic of conversation in these parts for the last few days. I knew it could get cold in Florida, but today passed all of my expectations. So in between shaking and shivering about 26 of us stood off in the qualifying round of this invitation tournament. Helen Hicks Harb runs the event, and, by the way, she was winner in the titleholders' tournament in August last week.

The field here is very good with most of the regulars on hand except Patty Berg, who, I think, will start her mark in Miami next week. However, Marion Miley, Jane Cothran, Jean Bauer, little Elizabeth Hicks (no relation to Helen), and Clara Callender, a several other good players are on hand.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

Elizabeth Hicks and Clara Callender came all the way from sunny California to play in these tournaments. Clara plays a fine game of golf and is going to be awfully hard to handle. She got off to a flying start by tying for the medal this morning. She and Marion Miley had 81's. Then came two 82's shot by Hicks and Cothran. I certainly hate to print this, but I was next in line with a snappy 85. I might mention that when all was said and done I was mighty glad to get it. I was out in 46 and back in 39. It doesn't seem possible to vary so much, but there it is just the same. You can tell by the sound of the scores just how bad the cold and wind were. That is a good excuse for me, too. No-body seems to be really hitting the ball any too well. This is a difficult course, but it hasn't a sand trap anywhere about. However, it makes up for that little item by a lot of other trouble such as narrow fairways and rather tall rough.

Elizabeth Hicks and Clara and I went out this afternoon to see if anything could be done to improve our fading games. I don't know that much was accomplished, though.

THIRD HOLE.

There is one hole in particular that made an impression on me and that is the third one. It is only a short 250 yard par three hole. I wound up with a nice five one after shanking a shot in the meantime, but I felt a lot better about it when I heard that I was not the only struggler. Jane Cothran took a big six, Elizabeth had a five and so did Jean Bauer. So that is where a lot of strokes are lost for when you take a five or six on a par three hole it's just too bad.

When the pairings were drawn up I found myself in a tough spot and if my golf doesn't improve I don't see how I can get out of it. For I play a Miss Garman tomorrow who shot a 92, if not a 91. I get by her I meet up with Elizabeth Hicks. Also in the same bracket with me are Miley and Bauer. I think they have rather easy matches for the first round. In the lower bracket is Clara Callender and Jane Cothran, just to mention the leading ones. I don't want to overlook Mrs. Howe, who is also in the lower part of the bracket. She is about 56 years old, and has been national champion and a very fine golfer and today she shot herself an 85. Now I tell you that makes me look and feel very very badly over my 93.

Purples Face Canton, Smithies Play Commercial Five Tonight

TRIPLE-HEADER COURT PROGRAM TO START AT 6:30

Canton Girls and Sewell Service-Open Card; Fast Games Seen.

By ROY WHITE.
A triple-header starting at 6:45 o'clock tonight on the Henry Grady court will feature the quarter final round of the first half of the Big Seven basketball series.

Canton's girls and Sewell Service will open the program, followed by Canton's boys and Boys' High and Tech High and Commercial High.

Another big game on today's program will be played at Columbus when Columbus High, the league leader, plays its bitter Columbus rival, Jordan High. G. M. A drew a bye and will wait until Friday to battle Tech High in its only game this week.

Boys' High, with somewhat of a gloomy outlook at the beginning of the season due to loss of two line guards, Jack McKinney and Loftin Smith, has become one of the league's sensations. The Purples have lost only to Columbus, one of the few undefeated prep basketball teams in the state against all opposition. Boys' High is one of the seeded teams in the G. I. A. A. tournament late in February at Columbus.

Coach Dwight Keith has no outstanding player on his team nor has he an outstanding marksman, but a well-balanced group, likely to break loose with a barrage of field goals at any time.

Canton lost to Tech High in the last 15 seconds of play on the Henry Grady court, and, though the North Georgia team has won but one game, it is probably one of the strongest in the league. Canton opened up with the best in the league, Columbus, Tech High and G. M. A.

The North Georgia team will be no easy picking for Boys' High tonight and the winner is certain to be well up in the standings at the end of the season.

Haley at center and Adams at guard appear Canton's best scorers.

Doyle, Reese and Edelstein led the Purples' attack, though no two of the Purples have been "hot" in the same game.

Tech High, though beaten at Columbus, should rule a slight favorite over Commercial tonight.

Commercial has Janko and Wallace, two of the best scorers in the league when they are "right," and, once the Typists get going, they will be hard to stop.

TEACHERS BEATEN.
LAUREL, Neb., Jan. 22.—(P)—The Laurel High school faculty is convinced the varsity basketball team is pretty good. The varsity, wearing husky gloves and four-buckle overshoes, beat the Teachers, 31 to 30.

Druid Hills To Name '40 Officers Tonight

The annual election of officers and business meeting of the Druid Hills Golf Club will be held at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the club on Ponce de Leon avenue.

A buffet supper will open the annual session, followed by the annual reports and election of officers for the new year.

A dance until midnight will close the program, immediately after the new officers have been introduced to the membership.

MONEY-MAKING MISS? --- SONJA SETS NEW HIGH

Gentlemen, take off those money-making hats, Sonja Henie's the new high-salaried athletic champion. The famous woman skater and movie actress, has been drawing in the checks at the box office on her personal appearance tour at a rate to make the most famous of all sports money-makers, including Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Jack Dempsey, Earl Sande, Gene Tunney, Bill Tilden and Eddie Shore, take on the appearance of panhandlers. Sonja's reported to be getting something like $500,000 for 12 weeks' skating and this is her third such tour. And that doesn't take into account her pictures, for which she is said to receive $250,000 apiece. Ruth didn't get as much for 20 years of baseball as Sonja gets in three short tours. Cobb didn't earn as much in 25 years. Tunney's and Dempsey's millions must give way to Sonja's. Earl Sande, the greatest jockey of 'em all, sometimes made as much as $100,000 a year. Tilden played tennis 20 years and came nowhere making as much as Sonja does for a few whirls about the ice. Shore, top-paid hockey star, would have to play 30 years to make as much as Sonja makes in 30 days.

Crangle Handled Dogs Liked in Quitman Trials

George Trains Dogs He Handles; Won at Pinehurst and Waynesboro.

By TOM McRAE.
Most of the handlers left Waynesboro for Quitman with the idea that to win the Continental All-Age stake they must beat George Crangle's dogs.

George planned to carry only two—Raymond Hogland's Tip's Topsy Top and Dr. W. F. Vail's Nephew Carolina Jake. He was to handle Pathfinder Highland Rex, second place winner in the Waynesboro open derby, in the Continental Derby.

Of the four dogs that were in the money in the all-age at Waynesboro, George Crangle handled two of them: Tip's Topsy Top, winner of the $300 second prize, and C. F. Gaines' Bill's Dr. Rick, which shared third-place prize of $200 with W. R. Plowden's Sioux Bacon Shoal's Jake.

PINEHURST WINNER.
Carolina Jake won the Pinehurst all-age with Crangle handling.

Crangle came close to winning the Continental last year with Top, but the white and orange pointer weakened in the final minutes of the two-hour heat and Lester's Enjoy Wahoo won. Handlers really go after the Continental all-age. The judges can give the entire money, $1,000, to the best dog or declare a winner and runner-up and the money is divided $750 and $250.

George Crangle would probably think you were trying to kid him if you asked him his secret of success. But by competent authorities he is regarded as one of the country's best handlers. Most of the time he is training 40 dogs. That is, he and his two sons, Earl and Jimmie, and another handler or so are.

What helps him plenty, he says, is that he trains the dogs he handles as a rule and knows their peculiarities and hunting habits. He thinks if a dog has it, he should be ready after a couple of seasons in Canada and a couple down here. Probably one of his best boys was the way he brought Carolina Jake around. Jake had been poorly handled, was gun shy, and seemed that he would never come around. George worked with him a year before he could begin much training. His patience with Jake was justified as Jake has proven one of the best of the current all-age dogs.

FINE SPORTSMANSHIP.
One of the best examples of the fine sportsmanship shown at field trials came the night before the all-age ended.

Franklin Daniel, of Comer, worked with Dixie Egyptian Sam, owned by E. L. Bearden, of Cartersville. Bearden entered the dog and Daniel was to handle him.

Daniel was a bit uneasy that night in the lobby of the Anthony Wayne. He had never handled a dog in a big trial. He was worried about a horse and he went to Fred Jordan, president of the Georgia Field Trial Association.

Fred arranged to get him a good horse.

Daniel wondered whom he could get to put his dog down. Fred told him it would be best for him to put his own dog down. Then Daniel asked who would hold his horse. Fred said he would.

Someone had to scout for Daniel. Fred got Ed Mack Farrior, one of the best young handlers, to Daniel was a bit hesitant accepting these favors from Fred. "Mr. Jordan, I hate to let you do all these things for me. My dog and yours are in the same brace, you know, and I'll be trying to beat you."

Fred laughed and said he was glad to do anything he could—before the dogs were put down. But then—then he would be pulling for him to give Daniel's an awful licking.

It was so cold in Waynesboro water in a canteen froze. A heavy canvas cover was on the canteen. One side of the canteen seemed to have been warm from the heat of the horse's body. The jogging of horse, it seems, would have kept the water sloshing around to prevent freezing. But in spite of all this, the water froze. An old negro said the wind came direct from the North Pole without hitting nothing till it got to Waynesboro.

Probably Judges G. W. Stanbery and George Suttle established some sort of record for efficiency in running off the trials. They ran the whole thing off without a hitch. Time one brace of dogs were picked up the next brace was ready to go down.

All-Age Pairings

QUITMAN, Ga., Jan. 22.—Pairings were announced today for the 45th annual Continental field trials, which will start tomorrow at Gerald M. Livingston's Dixie plantation south of here.

Lester's Enjoy Wahoo will defend his title won last year.

Tenth brace—Fiorita, owned by G. D. Coleman, and handled by G. D. Coleman, and Sam Young, owned by Dr. B. S. Lester, Birmingham, Ala., and handled by J. S. Gale.

CLEVELAND WINS TWO.
CLEVELAND, Ga., Jan. 22.—Cleveland boys took another revenge game in the all-age stake, when they played an easy win, 41-6, when the girls played with Mayville here. Both boys and girls have been handicapped by sickness, but have turned in a highly creditable record so far.

Accepting these favors from Fred. "Mr. Jordan, I hate to let you do all these things for me. My dog and yours are in the same brace, you know, and I'll be trying to beat you."

Fred laughed and said he was glad to do anything he could—before the dogs were put down. But then—then he would be pulling for him to give Daniel's an awful licking.

It was so cold in Waynesboro water in a canteen froze. A heavy canvas cover was on the canteen. One side of the canteen seemed to have been warm from the heat of the horse's body. BAKER NAMED CARNEGIE TECH GRIDIRON COACH

Kern's First Assistant Is Given Two-Year Contract.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 22.—(P)—Dr. Eddie Baker, for three years first assistant and backfield coach, today was named head football coach at Carnegie Tech, succeeding William F. (Bill) Kern.

He steps into the post that Kern resigned to become head coach at West Virginia University because the outlook at Tech seemed as dismal as the Tartans' 1939 grid record. He was given a two-year contract.

Baker enrolled at the University of Pittsburgh from Nanticoke, Pa., and was graduated from the school of dentistry in 1931. Like Kern, he was an assistant at Pitt under Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, and accompanied Kern to Tech at the close of the 1936 season.

The whirlwind tactics of the Celtics were equally as amazing to Macraes fans as the dead-still goal work of Banks, Hickey and Birch.

A maximum-sized court seemed to make all the difference in the world in the play of the Celtics tonight. They had more room to maneuver and they made the most of it.

The Crakers didn't have Virlyn Moore, but even Virlyn doing at his best couldn't have helped the Atlanta club very much tonight. For when the Celtics are hitting the goal at long range and moving around like mechanized men they're unbeatable.

BANKS GETS 17.
Banks ran the bucket for 17 points. Hickey came next with 12 and Birch collected nine. That was the answer.

On the Cracker side, Ed Copeland's 13 points loomed large. Fred Bradford was the only other serious scoring threat with eight points.

The Celtics seemed to be bent on giving the Crakers the fanciest licking of the series, and the 10-point margin at the end was the biggest margin of the four games played.

IN TENNIS.
The all-time top in tennis for the little men was Little Bill Johnston, of California, now living quietly along the Pacific.

Little Bill once told me his normal weight was around 116 pounds. Yet in 1919 he beat Bill Tilden three out of four sets for the championship, and always carried Bill head and head into the clutch.

Johnston had a forehead drive worthy of someone who weighed over 170 pounds. It was terrific—smoking hot.

And, of course, there is still Bryan (Bitty) Grant, of Atlanta, who only was defeated by Bobby Riggs in Wimbledon—Riggs the winner at Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

I saw Bitty take the measure of Ellsworth Vines as an amateur, when Vines was on top. He was about the toughest little chunk of human flesh that tennis has ever known. And he still is.

GATE RECEIPTS BAN.
DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 22.—(P)—W. G. Bramham, minor league baseball czar, today ordered a mail vote to determine whether the present ban against players sharing in the receipts of so-called "Shanghaied" and other post-season playoffs should be retained or abolished. The regulation against giving players a part of the gate applies to all leagues of lower than AA classification.

TECH AT SOUTH BEND
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 22.—(P)—Elmer Layden, Notre Dame athletic director, announced today the Irish 1940 football schedule which calls for four home tilts.

Georgia Tech, originally to have played host to the Irish at Atlanta, will come to South Bend for a contest October 12.

CRONIN COUNTS ON JIM BAGBY
Did Landis Throw Trout Back Because He Was Too Small?

By JUDSON BAILEY.
NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—(P)—Refueling the hot stove, to the tune of throw another log on the fire, Judge:

Has anybody suggested that Commissioner Landis threw trout back because he wasn't of legal size? The only baseball club that hasn't announced the signing of any players is Brooklyn, where the most publicity-conscious magnate in the business holds forth. . . . Larry McPhail says he just doesn't believe in it; but there will be a big splash when he goes through the formality of signing Manager Leo Durocher next month. . . . Most major league clubs carry two coaches; the Washington Senators have four. . . . So what?

Joe Cronin is counting plenty on a comeback by Pitcher Jim Bagby, who had a touch of temperament last season and was allowed to work it off at Little Rock. . . . He won 15 games for Boston's Red Sox his first year up.

A Chicago Cub fan has raised that old question about Al Todd being weak at catching curves because Larry French's complaint last summer was supposed to be that Gabby Hartnett didn't call for a curve ball often enough. . . . Now that Gus Mancuso has been traded to the Dodgers, the question is where does that leave French. . . . French leave?

The Yankees may do some more marketing before the season opens. . . . Three rookies, Walt Judnich, Charles Stancu and George Washburn, were not offered contracts when President Ed Barrow sent out the mail to the rest of the league. . . . Pitcher Chubby Dean rang the bell at 351 as a pinch-hitter for the Athletics last season. . . . Forty-six former American Legion junior baseball players were in the majors in 1939.

The Cincinnati Reds have given up the idea of flying from Florida to Cuba for their three-game exhibition series in March and will go by boat. . . . First training camp roster to reach this desk was Washington's red, white and blue folder listing 39 players, including three Cubans, one Venezuelan and one Canadian.

Ft. Benning Bowler Wins Valley Title
COLUMBUS, Ga., Jan. 22.—Joe Bitala, of Fort Benning, won the annual Chattahoochee valley individual duckpin championship here with a 10-game total of 1,195 to annex the title, gold medal and top cash award in the third staging of this contest. Bitala is pacing Columbus bowlers in league average with a 117 this season.

Bob Edmond, Columbus, won the silver medal for runner-up position with a 1,138 series; Bill Reich, Columbus, won the bronze medal with 1,113 for third place; Judge Lee Wyatt, LaGrange, had 1,112 to win the copper medal for fourth place.

Miss T. E. Martin, Columbus, won the top cash award and gold medal in the women's five-game event of the contest with a total of 550.

Celtics Outscore Cracker Five, 42-32

Famous New Yorkers Take 3-1 Edge in Colorful Series With Victory at Macon.

By JACK TROY.
MACON, Ga., Jan. 22.—The H-o-u-s-e of Houdinis of the Hardwood actually played a game before they met the Atlanta Crakers tonight and, having got warmed up, they staged the greatest show in Macon's basketball history as they won, 42-32.

Master showmen in basketball loggery, the Celtics for the first time ran up a commanding half-time lead on their Atlanta opponents and then cut loose with a rapid succession of tricks which captivated a crowd of 1,500 in the municipal auditorium.

It was the first time since they have been playing the Crakers in the series that the Celtics scheduled a game beforehand. They played at near-by Jeffersonville and then drove on in for the game.

CELTICS RED-HOT.
Little Davy Banks, Nat Hickey and Paul Birch were red-hot from the floor and they fired away at will as the ball seemed to be operated on a string from their hands to the basket.

And so, as the score at half-time read 26-13 in their favor, the crafty Celtics returned to the work of Banks, Hickey and Birch, tongues out as they pulled one amazing piece of trickery after another.

Macon fans wondered about reports they had heard about the Celtics slowing up. If they were slow tonight, the more youthful Crakers, who are not exactly as slow as molasses in January, were slower.

WHIRLWIND TACTICS.
The whirlwind tactics of the Celtics were equally as amazing to Macon fans as the dead-still goal work of Banks, Hickey and Birch.

A maximum-sized court seemed to make all the difference in the world in the play of the Celtics tonight. They had more room to maneuver and they made the most of it.

CHRISTIAN FRONT AND DIES 'LINKED' BY CONGRESSMAN

Bill To Renew Life of Committee Expected To Pass in House Today; Kuhn Meeting Is Cited.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—(P)—A resolution to re-establish the House Committee on Un-American Activities cleared its first legislative hurdle today despite a charge that its chairman, Representative Dies, Democrat, Texas, had "actively associated" with a "Fellow Traveler" of the Christian Front.

The House Rules Committee unanimously approved the resolution. Leaders said its approval by the house tomorrow was virtually certain. The Dies Committee's authority expired January 3.

Representative Hook, Democrat, Michigan, linked Dies' name with the Christian Front, 17 of whose members have been arrested in New York and charged with plotting to overthrow the government. Hook put into the congressional record a statement declaring that Dies was in "active association with a prominent collaborator" of the Christian Front, and had been "taking us for a ride for his own political purposes." This "collaborator," Hook said, was Merwin K. Hart, of New York City.

Hook declared Dies was guest of honor at a meeting of the New York state economic council in New York on December 8, 1938, at which Hart presided and Fritz Kuhn, German-American Bund leader, was among the guests.

Dies, who is ill at his home in Orange, Texas, said tonight that Hook's statement was "too ridiculous to justify serious consideration." Dies said he knew Hart but had never been associated with him.

HART DENIES CONNECTION WITH CHRISTIAN FRONT
NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—(P)—Merwin K. Hart tonight declared that an assertion by Representative Hook, Democrat, Michigan, that Hart was a "prominent collaborator" of the Christian Front was "an unmitigated lie."

YAARAB CHANTERS NAME A. W. EVANS

Shrine Group's Annual Meet and Election Is Featured by Banquet.

Yaarab Temple Chanters, famed throughout the United States as one of the best singing organizations in Shrinedom, held its annual meeting last night at Atlanta Athletic Club, and elected Noble Alvin W. Evans as president to succeed Noble Paul Crutchfield, who has served during the past year.

Noble Roger T. Lively was re-elected secretary, and Noble William F. Talley was again chosen treasurer. The membership committee for 1940 will be Nobles Warren H. Bearden and Curtis S. Buford, and Nobles Thomas G. Fowler and Leslie Hubbard were chosen as the music committee.

Noble Frank A. Cundell, who organized the Chanters in 1916, and has been continuing director, was re-elected and Noble Walter Aichel will again serve as accompanist.

Following the annual banquet, guests from five other organizations of Yaarab Temple were introduced, together with members of the elective divan.

The newly elected Potentate Barnes E. Sale was introduced, and Past Potentates William A. Fuller, Dewell A. Cohen, Hiram R. Romans, Roy S. Mather and Wilbur F. Glenn made short talks. The entertainment features concluded with several songs by the Chanters.

Do Speed Traps Exist in Georgia? Detroit and State Patrol Disagree

Michigan Citizen Fears Travel Here If Newspaper Reports Are Correct. Troopers Say Roads Don't Permit High Speeds; Fast Drivers Arrested.

Are there speed traps in Georgia? Detroit motorists and Detroit newspapers say "yes." The Georgia State Patrol says "no." Here are both sides of the argument:

The following self-explanatory letter was received by The Constitution yesterday from Dr. Joseph E. Brady, of Detroit, who usually vacations in the south each winter to escape Michigan's cold.

"I am hearing frequently through the Detroit papers of speed traps being operated on certain highways in Georgia, one being U. S. 41. For several winters, I have been driving through Georgia to Florida, and we always enjoy a few days in your beautiful state but feel apprehensive, along with several friends, about doing so this winter if there is any foundation for these rumors.

"We can take another route through Louisville, Birmingham and Montgomery, but the distance is 200 miles longer that way.

"Enclosed is a copy of an article from one of the Detroit papers regarding speed traps. Any information you can give me will be duly appreciated."

The newspaper clipping reads: "SPEED TRAP WARNING: 'Detroiters driving south are cautioned to proceed with care on local traffic regulations on southern highways if they would avoid so-called 'speed traps.' A Detroit motorist returned recently from Florida reports being fined $10 in Perry, Ga., after state troopers had trailed him for seven miles. His violation ticket stated that he was guilty of driving 'too fast for conditions,' although he had not exceeded the speed limit. The Detroit motorist later met 11 other drivers who experienced similar difficulties along U. S. 41 in Georgia."

There are no speed traps in Georgia. The state patrol cars stay in plain sight, but the patrolmen have orders to arrest all drivers who exceed the speed limits, whether they be Georgians or from out of state.

This was the information supplied yesterday by Captain Dave M. Simmons, of the state patrol, in the absence of Commissioner Lon Sullivan.

"Our highways are not built for speeds of 70 or 80 miles an hour," Captain Simmons said. "They are dangerous at those speeds. We are making no cases unless the driver exceeds the 55-mile-an-hour law, and the roads are well marked, calling attention to this limit."

"We have had many complaints from out-of-state motorists this year because we have arrested them for violations of the speed law instead of giving them warnings as we did last year. We are forced to make the cases, to make the drivers obey the regulations. There were approximately 100 out-of-state motorists killed on Georgia highways last year."

Captain Simmons said state patrolmen met visitors at Rossville on U. S. 41, and distributed information about Georgia highway regulations. Also, he said, large speed-limit signs are clearly visible to motorists as they enter the state on all highways.

"When we stop these speeders, they tell us they saw the speed signs but didn't think they meant anything," Simmons continued.

Commissioner Sullivan at present is endeavoring to promote a conference of all southeastern state safety commissioners to set standard regulations so interstate motorists will not be worried constantly with changing regulations.

Reds at Rally Pledge Browder Seat in House

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—(P)—Communists tonight filled Madison Square Garden—which seats some 20,000—in a demonstration commemorating the 16th anniversary of the death of Lenin and protesting the passport fraud conviction today of Earl Browder, their national leader.

The chairman of the meeting, Israel Amter, declared that Browder had been convicted by a "capitalist court."

"We have a different task for Comrade Browder," he cried out amid applause. "In spite of his conviction the people of the 14th congressional district are going to send Earl Browder to the United States congress."

Browder is Communist candidate for the house seat left vacant by the recent death of Representative Sirovich, Democrat, New York.

Banners on the stage denounced the Finns and referred to "the butcher Mannerheim (the Finnish officer responsible for the country's Mannerheim Line)."

U. S. JURY FINDS BROWDER GUILTY

pounded the jury box rail to emphasize his points.

"Did this display of the passport gain entrance into the United States for me?" he asked. "It did not. The display of the passport informed the inspector that he could not keep me out."

"Upon its face the government's case can best be described by a quotation from Lincoln in connection with the Dred Scott case: 'It is as thin as homeopathic soup made by boiling the shadow of a pigeon which has starved to death.'"

Browder spoke for an hour and a quarter. His concluding remarks were:

"I am a Communist. I'm proud of it and have nothing to apologize for."

John T. Cahill, United States attorney, urged the jury to use "common sense and experience."

Browder's conviction in federal court came only several weeks after Fritz Kuhn was found guilty in a state court and sent to prison for stealing funds from the German-American Bund which he headed.

Browder served a sentence in Leavenworth (Kan.) federal prison after refusing to register for a World War army draft on the ground that he was a conscientious objector.

At the sentencing today, Browder, whose official position is that of general secretary of the Communist party, U. S. A., stood mute before the bench, his hands clasped behind his back.

His bail of $7,500 was continued until Wednesday when he must appear for approval of a new bond which would allow him continued freedom pending appeal.

EQUIPMENT URGED FOR MILLION MEN

Colonel Bres, Reserve Officer President, Says Nation Needs Such Defense.

America should strive for a fully-equipped army of one million men, Colonel Edward S. Bres, of New Orleans, president of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States, declared in an interview here yesterday.

Colonel Bres, who is a consulting engineer in civil life, visited Atlanta yesterday to confer with Colonel E. W. Smith, of Atlanta, national chairman of the organization's policy committee.

"I do not mean that we should keep a standing army of that number," he pointed out, "but we should have full material and equipment for that number so that in the event of an emergency that many men, fully equipped, could be assembled on mobilization day."

During his visit here, the colonel conferred briefly with Stanley D. Embick, commanding general of the Fourth Corps area and of the Third army.

He was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Capital City Club by members of the Atlanta chapter, Reserve Officers' Association.

North Fulton School Students Will Enroll at Various Colleges

By SALLY FORTH.

THE TOPIC of conversation these days between parents of senior class students at Fulton High school, is where shall they send their daughters to college next fall? Mary Ann Robinson expects to follow in the footsteps of her mother, and enroll at Hollins College in Virginia. The attractive daughter of the Julian Robinsons has made the honor roll all this year at North Fulton, and if she keeps up her record, she will receive a wonderful gift from her father at the close of school next June.

Jane Tuttle stands out as one of the most studious girls in the senior class, and is the brilliant daughter of the Elbert Tuttle. When she enrolls at Wellesley College in Massachusetts, one of her classmates will be Mary Jane Brock, daughter of the Pope Brocks, who will complete her education at Wellesley.

Lillian Winslip is considering entering Sweetbriar College in Virginia, or Gulf Park College in Gulfport, Miss., and she is the daughter of the Joseph Winslips. Alice Thomas seems to be wavering between enrolling at Gunston Hall in the national capital, or St. Mary's College in Raleigh, N. C. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thomas.

The Jack Thiesens' youngest daughter, Jacquelin, has her attention turned upon Gunston Hall in Washington, D. C., when she graduates from North Fulton. Her enrollment at this school carries special import because her mother, her sisters, Mary Thiesen Reynolds, of Greenville, S. C., and Christine Thiesen, claim Gunston Hall as their Alma Mater. Louise Lamar, daughter of the G. G. Lamars, who moved here from Jacksonville, Fla., is seriously contemplating her enrollment at Sweetbriar or at Gulf Park College in Gulfport, Miss.

Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, will claim the enrollment of Polly Rushton, daughter of the W. W. Rushtons, Virginia Boynton has decided upon a secretarial school in New York City. She is the daughter of Mrs. George Boynton.

Frances Longino, daughter of the Hinton Longinos, is considering Sweetbriar College in Virginia. And so is Mary Hurl Clayton, who is eager to study at this well-known college.

Anne Carter, daughter of the E. V. Carters, is contemplating finishing her education at the University of Georgia, or at Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C.

Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., seems to be favored by Charlotte Holbrook, daughter of the E. A. Holbrooks, Virginia Hopkins, daughter of the Charles Hopkins, has her attention turned on Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y.

CONGRATULATIONS upon the arrival of their brand-new son, John Harris III, are being showered upon Mr. and Mrs. John Harris Boman Jr., the baby having first seen the light of day on Saturday at Emory University hospital. Mrs. Boman, you know, is the former Marie Askew, who enjoyed wide popularity during her young ladyhood in this city.

When little John can be removed from the hospital, he will be ensconced in the attractive nursery built for him at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Johnson, on Dellwood drive, where his parents will reside for the next several months. Mrs. Johnson is remembered as the former Gertrude Askew, who, like her sister, was a sought-after belle before her marriage.

Breads Made With Bran Add Nutritive Value to Diet

Bran Nut Bread Finds Its Place In Any Meal

By Sally Saver.

Foods making use of bran always are received with enthusiasm by homemakers. They have learned that bran is important in the diet because it supplies bulk, which element often is insufficiently supplied by refined diets. Bran muffins, bran cornsticks, and now bran nut bread, shown today, should be served often during these cold days when hot breads are so warmly welcome.

Make bran nut bread in this way:

Bran Nut Bread.

1 egg
3-4 cup sugar
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening
3-4 cup bran
2 1-4 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
3-4 cup chopped nut meats

Beat egg and sugar until light. Add milk, shortening and bran. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; combine with nut meats; add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Bake in a greased loaf pan, with waxed paper in the bottom, in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 1 hour and 10 minutes. Yield: 1 loaf in a 4 1-2x9 1-2 inch pan.

Spread with softened cheese, butter, marmalade, jam or jelly. This bread is ideal for school lunches, after-school feedings, tea and late snacking.

Questions about foods, recipes and service will be answered personally by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution or WA. 8565.

Bridge Experts Are Baffled by This Hand

By Harold Sharpsteen.

One of the outstanding hands in the recent southern California open pair championship for the famous Gilmore trophy, was dealt during the first night qualifying rounds. The complete deal, which is given below, was played by some of the best tournament players in southern California.

About one-half of the teams arrived at a contract of six hearts, but the contract was never fulfilled. Some teams were defeated as many as three tricks, yet the hand can be correctly bid to six hearts and made by careful play.

BIDDING PROBLEM.

There were many heated discussions as to the proper bidding and play of the hand. How do you think it should be bid? How would you play the hand to make six hearts?

NORTH.
S-8
H-K 9 4 3
D-K 10 9 6 5 3
C-10 9

WEST.

EAST.

C-K 7 6 5 4

SOUTH.
S-A K J 5 3
H-A J 10 8
D-A
C-A 3 2

South may logically make a conservative opening of one spade. There are too many losers to open two in a suit. North responds two diamonds, after which South is justified in making a three-heart jump rebid, forcing to game. After receiving a raise to four hearts from North, South is certainly not over-optimistic in going on to six hearts without further delay.

BLACKWOOD TOO HIGH.
A Blackwood five notrump bid by South, after North's raise is too dangerous because South would get a six spade response from partner hiding three kings and the four-card heart suit does not justify a seven bid.

West's best opening lead against the six heart contract is the Club Queen which South wins with the Ace.

South should now lead the Diamond Ace, followed by the Spade Ace and King, discarding dummy's losing club on the King. East should trump the spade King lead and return another club, forcing dummy to ruff and thereby killing a necessary entry to the dummy hand. The club return by East is trumped with a small heart in dummy.

EIGHT TRICKS TO GO.
At this point there are still eight tricks to go and declarer can not afford to lose another trick if he is to fulfill the contract.

With the start you have, it should not be difficult. Can you win the remaining eight tricks and score a small slam in hearts?

Till tomorrow. . . .

Bette Davis Plans Special Visiting Days for Relatives

By Sheila Graham.

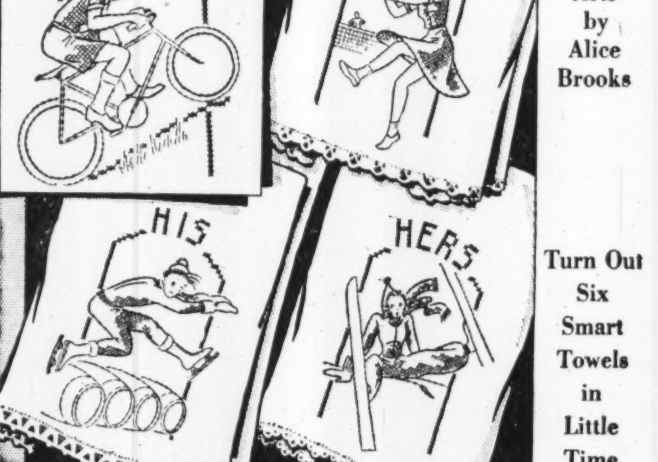

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22.—Gertrude Michael, who used to earn her regular $1,500 a week, is now living in one room in Hollywood and trying to interest the producers into giving her a job. As I remember her, Miss Michael was a swell actress. Why not give her a chance, boys? . . . Hedy Lamarr tells me that the only reason she accompanied Gene Markey to New York was to avoid the Hollywood honeymoon of ex-husband Fritz Mandl. (I wish all other stars were as frank as Hedy.) And, by the way, it was kind of funny at that cocktail party for Bette Davis to watch the photographers trying to get a picture together of Mr. and Mrs. Markey and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wanger (Jean Bennett, and formerly the wife of Markey). Every time the lens boys had the group set, one of the quartet, mostly Wanger, walked out of the picture. I don't think they ever did get the photograph.

And talking about honeymoons, the Madeleine Carroll-Fred Mac Murray starrer, titled "Honeymoon in Bali," is being shown to English audiences as "Husbands and Lovers." It's working title in the country was originally "Are Husbands Necessary?"—until Madeleine, who was getting a divorce at the time from her English mate, threatened to walk out unless it was changed to something less challenging. She seems to have lost out doubly in England.

Current chatter that Orson Welles will leave Hollywood without making a picture must be discounted in view of the fact that Orson has already received half of the $150,000 promised him for his acting, writing, directing and producing chore. That boy certainly is nobody's fool. . . . Greer Garson's troubles are not yet over. It is not enough that she has been yanked from "Susan and God," but now Vivien Leigh wants to play the leading part in "Pride and Prejudice," which Greer was promised as compensation for the loss of the Susan role. It seems that a certain Laurence Olivier is up for the masculine lead in the Jane Hunchent, "Nough said. I have a hunch that unless Greer gets better treatment she will leave Hollywood and accept one of the numerous stage offers received from the Broadway theater moguls.

Bette Davis says, regarding her new house in the valley—"I'm going to live alone, and I'm going to like it." "What about your family?" she is asked (in recent weeks Miss Davis has been surrounded with relatives). "There will be special visiting days for them," says Bette, firmly. . . . And here's Olivia de Havilland, agent the rumormongers with Jimmy Stewart—"It's all so ridiculous, this talk about Jimmy proposing to me." This is leap year, Olivia—why not propose to him? Or to Howard Hughes? The latter is the real number one throb in the lady's life. And it is my belief that she will only marry another man when she is quite sure that Mr. Hughes is not for her.

Joel McCrea has broken his contract with Edward Small to play the title role in Small's production, "Kit Carson." And all because Mr. Small removed Mrs. Joel McCrea (Frances Dee) from the cast of "My Son, My Son" because she did not measure up to Small's conception of Maeve. Nie to have a husband who goes to bat for you like that, but I'm not sure Joel's action is fair or ethical. What do you think?

Daughter Needs A Few Lessons In Self-Control

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: I'm a heartbroken mother and while I think I am the one to blame in this case I need your help. Of my four children one daughter is married and lives nearby in a lovely home. At present she is ill and I have her two children. She spares no words to tell me what a failure I am, how little I do for her, and when she is well she comes over and stages the most awful scenes in our otherwise peaceful home.

Last night my husband asked me to go with him to his club for a ladies' night. I actually didn't want to go but felt it my duty to go. So I asked her to let the children sleep at home (mine stayed alone) while I was out for the evening. She flew into a temper and told me I must make up my mind whether I was going to run the streets or do my part by her and her children. I took red eyes to the party in consequence.

I love my grandchildren and they are a great joy to me. I don't begrudge anything I do for them and I try to make excuses for my daughter on the ground that she's a high-strung nervous temperament. But it is a great grief to me that I have neither her love nor respect and it must be my fault, though I don't know where I fell down.

N. N.

Pretty hard for an outsider to tell a woman where she let her foot slip in rearing her children. Who knows what was in the egg? Who knows the secrets of inheritance of each side? The kindest construction to put upon your married daughter's outrageous behavior is that she's "from the mind gone out." You should employ a good psychiatrist to give you an opinion on this point and act accordingly.

An institution is the place for a sick-minded woman, an institution where she will be taught elementary lessons in self-control. It's all very well to make excuses for a high-strung nervous temperament but when such temperamental people are permitted to go unchecked and unrestrained, they end by being plain nuts. There's a fine line between sanity and insanity and most of us could run ourselves crazy by claiming the privilege of throwing fits when we feel a foul humor coming on.

In the meantime you have a duty to yourself and to other members of your family which you should discharge and if the doctor says the daughter isn't mentally upset, you might try a little self-respecting independence and notify her that the children are coming home to her until such time as she can behave with civility to you. You can't get the best of a bully by permitting her to bully you.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

You Must Know All the Smart Dance Steps

This young man will have trouble getting another girl to be his partner! Dance step: baffle him—so he tries to shove and push his way through the delightful tango. So foolish to get a name as a poor dancer! If you practice at home with diagrams and instructions, your dancing quickly becomes smooth, graceful, modern—the kind everyone envies.

Try, for instance, the Change-Step in the tango. Count 1-2-3 forward with left foot, leaving right foot in place. 2—Tarnish weight back to right foot. AND—Bring left foot, rising slightly on balls of both feet and changing weight to left foot. 3—Step forward with right foot.

To dance in real tango style, to be in key with the glamorous music, take your steps with a precise, catlike tread, avoid movement above the waist.

The secret of perfection in other smart dances? In the tango, tango, use your heels, sway hips as you change weight. The Westchester you make a succession of sweeping glides.

Be admired for your dancing. Our 40-page booklet, SOCIAL DANCING SELF-TAUGHT, has step-by-step diagrams and instructions for all the popular dances—rumba, waltz, fox-trot, Westchester, tango, shag. Gives pointers on posture, leading and following—to make your dancing ace-high in any ballroom.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, SOCIAL DANCING SELF-TAUGHT, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

MY DAY Stage People Are Helping Finns

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.—Yesterday morning I attended the closing session of the conference on "Children in a Democracy," and we heard the final report and recommendations for action given by Mrs. Dunbar, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs. The group attending these conferences is an important and representative group. The fact there is a government department like the Children's Bureau, which can give leadership, insures continued progress during the next ten years.

A number of people are staying in the house. It was a great pleasure to have Miss Vandy Cape in for luncheon Saturday on her way through Florida. She brought me a bag made by a Czech-Slovakian refugee and told me of the struggle he was making, not only to support himself, but through his skill to give work to others, both refugees and unemployed Americans.

Artists are proverbially generous people and the legitimate theater in New York city, under Helen Hayes' chairmanship, is making a great effort through benefit performances, to add to the Finnish Relief Fund. She herself will give a performance of "Ladies and Gentlemen" in Boston on January 28. Gertrude Lawrence will give one in "Skylark," on January 29 in New York city, and this performance will be attended by many notables. Paul Muni, Tallulah Bankhead, Katharine Hepburn, Eddie Dowling, Katharine Cornell, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, S. Hurok and the company of "Pins and Needles" will all donate their services for performances. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have agreed to give an entire week of benefit performances.

The rest of us can do little but go and enjoy ourselves. I hope we will go in great numbers wherever these performances are given, for I think the people of America cannot help but have an admiration for the Finns.

Yesterday afternoon I had a meeting with the leaders of consumer organizations. There were government officials present and the people interested from the scientific point of view, as well as those interested because of their work among people who very greatly need consumer information. Miss Helen Hall, who is chairman of the Consumer National Federation and head of the Henry Street Settlement in New York city, arranged the meeting.

I was very grateful for the opportunity to learn more about the three main objectives of these organizations. They are: More useful information on labels, in advertising and in salesmanship; more facts about the quality of goods, their prices and the conditions under which they are made; and representation of consumers at council tables of business and government where decisions are being made affecting the goods and services coming to the market.

Exercise is a recuperative measure in the treatment of infantile paralysis. Don't fail to send your dime to the Infantile Paralysis Fund—these dimes will aid in making it possible for others to enjoy the use of their arms and legs. Marilyn Merrick, Warner Brothers' star, is playing leap frog at the beach—it's the type of outdoor exercise which keeps you young and healthy.

Your Community Benefits From Infantile Drive

By Ida Jean Kain.

There is nothing you cannot do with exercise. It's a miracle worker! But you probably don't believe in it as I do—I had infantile paralysis and exercise enabled me to walk again.

When I had this dread disease, children were not expected to recover from its crippling effects. But, fortunately, I rode a bicycle. And now it turns out that riding a bicycle is just the thing for anyone a little lame from paralysis. Pedaling the bike uses the same muscles as walking. And now I can walk as well as anybody. In fact, I think I have a beautiful walk! So, if I'm a bit insistent on the magic of exercise, you can understand why.

But that's not the point of this article. The point is, have you sent your dime to the infantile paralysis fund? Your dime will help to keep some child from being a hopeless cripple. The treatment is expensive and it takes 400 dimes to give one child one week's treatment. But last year, thanks to the nationwide response, 7,000 cases were treated!

It is not inconvenient to spend your dime for this cause. You can buy a button—the hotels, restaurants and theaters all have them on sale, and the children will bring them home from school. Or you can simply enclose your contribution in an envelope and mail it to the White House, Washington, D. C. Or you can use one of the President's birthday greeting cards, which have space for 10 dimes.

Whichever way you send your money, be sure to give your name and address, for 50 per cent of the fund is spent in the locality in which it was raised. The other 50 per cent goes to the national foundation and is used in research and in fighting epidemics.

The hospital at Warm Springs, Ga., is only one of hundreds for which these funds are used. During the last two years, Warm Springs has not received any of the money. Charts have been made and the money used where it was most needed.

In the treatment, exercise is a recuperative measure. While the disease is at its height, the muscles must be kept absolutely quiet—what is called keeping the muscles "in neutral." Braces and splints are used for this purpose. But after the acute period, exercises suited to the individual are started. Nowadays swimming, bicycling and corrective gymnastics are all a very important part of the after treatment.

Don't forget to send your dime! With "The March of Dimes" and the "Miles of Dimes," we can wipe out the devastating effects of this disease.

Medical Society Outlines Talk On Pneumonia

By Dr. William Brady.

Elect a doctor to office in the medical society or employ him in an editorial or other capacity in the office of publication of the medical society's organ, and he readily assumes that it is his province to teach other doctors how to practice medicine.

New York State Medical Society distributes to doctors a nine-page outline for a talk on pneumonia, from which I quote:

"Many normal people carry virulent pneumococci in their nose and throat. Persons in contact with cases (of pneumonia) frequently carry the same type of pneumococcus that is causing the disease in the patient."

"These carriers spread the germs from person to person through coughing, sneezing, kissing and even by talking and just breathing small droplets containing germs into the air. These are transmitted to other people in close contact with the carrier."

There it is at last, old timers, straight from the throne. Pneumonia may be spread via conversational spray. It has been a long struggle to get that vital fact acknowledged by the quaint health authorities. They now include talking with sneezing, coughing and kissing as modes of infection with respiratory disease shows the power of the press, the lay press, the public prints.

The outline for talk on pneumonia further enlightens the plodding practitioner, scheduled for a talk at the lunch club on the right answer for a familiar question, to wit, if so many people are carriers of pneumonia germs, why doesn't everyone get the disease?

To that the doctor should smile indulgently and explain that "two factors are believed to be necessary in order to develop pneumonia—exposure to virulent germ and a susceptible state; that is, lowered resistance." Who believes such twaddle the doctor, of course, need not reveal—that is, why the furtive mood of the verb believe is used. No matter—it is believed generally suffices to silence the dimwit who puts such a question.

And the resistance thing, heaven forbid that we try to discuss that intelligently. Who knows what "resistance" means, apart from immunity? Certainly not the bright young man of the New York State Medical Society who got up the outline for a talk on pneumonia.

There is a great deal of doubt, at least in my mind, that "pneumonia carriers" are common, if indeed they are concerned at all in the spread of pneumonia. It is quite conceivable that a nurse or a member of the family taking care of a pneumonia patient might possibly carry the germs to a third person, but the evidence that this happens is highly circumstantial and unconvincing.

The real hazard to guard against is the ba—bird who insists on coming to school, to work, to church, to the theater or club, approaching within conversational range when he has what he lightly passes off on you as a "cold." You never know, my friends, what the ba—bird has peppered you with until the infection has had time to develop. It is likely to be pneumonia as it is to be coryza or the flu.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Are You Sure You're Alkaline?
People trying to persuade us to use a mineral water, claim it is not a medicine and will not cure run-down condition, but if used every day as drinking water it will maintain normal vigor and it makes other alkalizing media unnecessary. (E. O.)

Answer: Well, I'll tell you, brother, if you promise not to let it go any farther. Whenever anybody begins to chatter about alkalinity or acidosis I say uh-huh and do-tell and let my mind dwell on the psychology of the speaker. My next game of lawn bowls. My notion of a gullible geek is one who buys water when perfectly pure drinking water may be had for nothing out of the kitchen faucet.

Do Have a Baby Book.
Potential or prospective parents should begin preparing for parenthood long before they receive news the new baby is on the assembly line. Instructions for the expectant father's diet and care are included in the booklet "Preparing for Maternity," 10c copy sent in next game of lawn bowls. My notion of a gullible geek is one who buys water when perfectly pure drinking water may be had for nothing out of the kitchen faucet.

Woman's Quiz
Q. How may egg custard be made without heating in the oven?
A. Place the cups in a shallow pan of water. Then cover the pan tightly and set it over a flame so low that the water does not boil.
Q. Can you suggest a use for table linen that has begun to show wear?
A. That each individual has the ability to grow and develop, and has the right to a happy childhood. He started his first kindergarten in 1837, and Mrs. C. Schurz introduced the idea into the United States when she started the first kindergarten in this country at Watertown, Wis., in 1856.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, give your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp, and mail to the Woman's Editor of The Constitution, Washington, Service Bureau, 1015 15th Street, N. E., Washington, D. C. for a reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed weekly. Don't telephone; write as directed.

GIRL AT THE FRONT

Claire Lands Safely on Soft Dirt. She Goes to Look for Bill and Rene

By BOB EDEN.

SYNOPSIS.
Claire Dutton, private secretary to William Cameron, American diplomatic official, rushes from the liner St. Croix at Le Havre as the Germans are being lowered. Cameron has not arrived from Paris and Claire knows she can't return home without him—'dear Bill,' she had an extra bag, a duplicate of her overnight bag. At the American embassy, Welles Canford summons Pierre Bonnet of the Surete Generale who finds in the bag an inflammable chemical capable of destroying the St. Croix in Cameron's hotel room. Claire finds a slip of paper on which Bill had written her first name three times and he had always called her Miss Dutton. Musing happily, she goes to her room to find her overnight bag gone. As she goes to meet Danny Brooks, Bill's newspaper friend, a stranger enters her taxi, tells her Cameron is alive and gave her her card reading "Z. Y. Y. Danny introduces her to Maria Herzek, who takes them to her flat. Rene Martin and George Roland and his wife to her flat. Noel York, who calls her, promises to be "Z. Y. Y." Sanford tells her Bill is dead but because he knows the plan for an Allied offensive. She agrees to fly to Berlin and through Frau Weber to meet Bill. Her pilot is Rene Martin. Bill escapes, joins Claire at the Weber flat, and they elude Gestapo searches. Martin picks them up in a clearing in a woods. Nazi planes riddle their ship and they hate out. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

She knew she was falling. It was a terrible feeling, like a nightmare in which she seemed to be tumbling off the edge of the world. Then there was a violent wrench, and she felt as if her shoulders were pulled out of joint. But blessed relief! She had stopped falling! She was floating in the air, and dimly above her she could see the white inner side of the parachute billowing out, catching the air!

A vagrant thought flashed through her mind as she floated between the heavens and the earth. She now was a member of the Caterpillar Club.

Halfway down, Claire began to worry about where she would land. What if it should be right in the midst of a German fortress—or even in a town? She'd have a time explaining how she happened to be bailing out of a plane in the middle of the night, even though she did have her false passport in her pocket.

Maybe she'd land in a lake or a river, or worse still, in a clump of trees. Instructions she had heard about parachute jumping came rushing back into her mind, and she hoped she could follow them.

Relax your muscles when you hit the ground, she remembered, but she wondered how it was possible when you couldn't see the ground. She'd have to strain her eyes, try to make out the deep shadow of the earth, try to judge the distance, and then relax as she struck. That was the way, she knew, to avoid broken bones. Then she must get out of the chute as quickly as possible so that if a gust of wind struck it she wouldn't be dragged.

She wondered what had happened to Bill and Rene. Where was Bill had been able to get the wounded French officer over the side, and jerk his chute open so he'd have a chance for life.

As these thoughts raced through her head, she was peering down, straining to get a glimpse of something that would give her an inkling of how close she was to the ground. Off at a distance, she caught the faint gleam of a pair of lights moving. It must be a car, with dimmed headlights. They didn't seem to be very far below her, so she set herself for the shock of hitting the ground. A moment later she saw a dark mass rushing up toward her, relaxed the muscles of her legs and felt herself hit.

The jar all but knocked the breath from her body, but she retained presence of mind enough to immediately slip out of the straps that held the parachute and as she let them fall to the ground, she slumped down herself to regain her nerve.

She marveled at her luck—she had landed on soft dirt. Feeling with her hands, she decided it must be a plowed field. There was a dank smell of newly-turned earth which confirmed this belief.

Feeling strong enough after a short rest, she got to her feet. What had happened to Bill and Rene? Had they come down anywhere near her? She didn't know when Bill had jumped. If he had stuck with the plane a minute longer than she did, he might be more than a mile away.

Cautiously she called his name and then Rene's, but when there was no answer, she decided there was nothing to be done until daylight. In the dark, she found the straps and the cords of her parachute. Doubling the cloth over, she made a seat for herself on the ground.

She found it much warmer there than it had been thousands of feet in the air, and the thrill of falling and then floating through space had set every nerve and muscle of her body to tingling. A few folds of the parachute silk would protect her some, and she settled down to wait until morning.

Far overhead she heard several planes, their throbbing motors echoing and re-echoing against the sky. Instinctively, she glanced upward, seeing nothing but the stars. Perhaps the patrol was returning to its base, or was still searching for the lone ship it had been told to intercept.

She wondered how far the Nazi plane that Rene had been flying would go without a hand to guide it, hopelessly damaged as it was. Fifteen or twenty miles, she hoped. A search would certainly be made for it in the morning, and when it was found empty there would be a hunt for the occupants. She would have to act quickly as soon as there was enough light to see. She must find Bill and Rene, and the three of them must somehow hide—in a place where planes flying overhead couldn't spot them and land patrols wouldn't see them.

Busy with her thoughts, time passed quickly and almost before she realized it, the stars began to grow dim in the sky and a faint grayness was discernable. Getting to her feet, she bundled the silk of the chute as tightly as she could, and carried it under her arm as she started out. She glanced in all directions about the field, but could see nothing of Bill or Rene. There wasn't even a house, although there might be one beyond the fringe of trees to the west.

She stumbled across the plowed ground in that direction, certain that if she found any trace of Bill and Rene it would be to the west or southwest.

There was a small stream of water along the edge of the field, which accounted for the irregular line of trees she had seen. Walking along the bank a short way, she came to a wooden crossing of planks, evidently placed there by the farmer who owned the land to act as a equipment over the creek. She decided this was a good place to hide her chute and carefully stuffed it out of sight far under the little bridge.

Then she walked on in the direction she knew to be southwest, coming out of the trees into another field. There was a slight breeze blowing now, and in the far corner of the field she thought she saw something moving slightly. Was it a parachute, lying on the ground, that was billowing in the wind?

Claire started to run, stumbled over a great clod of dirt and fell sprawling. She picked herself up and started on again, this time picking her way more carefully.

As she came nearer, she saw her first guess had been right. It was a chute on the ground, and beyond it she could see what appeared to be a large man, prone.

Sobbing with fear now, she hurried on and finally reached the pile of collapsed silk. She saw a man lying on the ground, and beside him another. Both wore helmets and goggles.

It was Bill she recognized first—the man nearest to the chute. He was flat on his back, and she sobbed with relief as she bent over him and saw he was breathing. Then she turned to Rene. He too was unconscious, and his face was very pale. Blood had caked in his leather flying jacket.

Quickly, Claire stripped off the men's helmets and ran back across the field to the stream. She filled the helmets with water, and when she got back to him, started bathing Bill's face and head.

It seemed an hour, but it really was only several minutes before Cameron started to moan and stir, and soon he was sitting up, looking vaguely about him. He didn't seem in the least surprised to find Claire on her knees beside him.

"Rene? Where is he?" was the first thing he said.

"Over there," Claire pointed.

"How is he?"

"Still out. I'm going to try the water treatment on him."

"The cognac in my pocket will be more effective," Cameron said, and painfully reached into his tunic for the bottle Frau Weber had forced on them before they left. It was not broken.

While Claire held Rene's head in her lap and bathed his forehead and temples with cold water, Cameron forced a few drops of the liquor between the Frenchman's lips. Soon he began to stir and groan but when he started to get up, he fell backward with a cry of pain.

He glanced up at them, his eyes blazing hatred for a moment. Then he recognized them.

"Good," he murmured. "You're both here. I thought the Nazis had me."

Claire and Bill succeeded in getting his jacket off, and Bill stripped away his inner coat and shirt to reveal a clean bullet wound through the fleshy part of his shoulder.

"That's swell," Cameron commented. "It was right through. All we need is a little antiseptic and a bandage, and you'll be all right, although you seem to have lost considerable blood."

After he had bathed the wound carefully with water, removing the dried, caked blood, he poured cognac into the wound, first in the front and then at the back while Rene, gritting his teeth, writhed with pain.

"If it burns a wound like that, what must it do to your stomach?" he smiled, weakly, when Cameron was using a part of his shirt to make a bandage for the wound.

"Are you able to walk?" Bill asked, anxiously. "We've got to get out of here before it gets much lighter. They'll have a patrol out looking for us."

"I'll get along, somehow," Rene answered, but he shuddered with pain as they helped him to his feet.

Rene was weaker than Bill and Claire had thought.

"You'd better leave me, he urged weakly. "I'm just a burden to you. Without me, you may be able to get away. With me, we're all lost. And if we're caught, you know what it means."

ALL OVER Thus appeared screenland's cute Jean Parker (right) yesterday to tell Judge Lindsey why she didn't want to be married up with George MacDonald any more. (Story on Page 3)

TROUBLE Switches froze up on 'em up at Buffalo last night, and railroad men had to get out there with gasoline and rags to thaw out the frogs and keep the trains straight. (Story on Page 7)

TEAM-UP Now here's Ronald Reagan, the actor, swearing out a marriage warrant for lovely Jane Wyman, actress. That's how it is in Hollywood—somebody loses; somebody wins. (Acme photo).

CARRY ON! You've heard of the one-armed paper-hanger! Well, behold Fan Dancer Marguerita, of Jacksonville. She broke her left hand, but carried on with one fan in the right. (Acme).

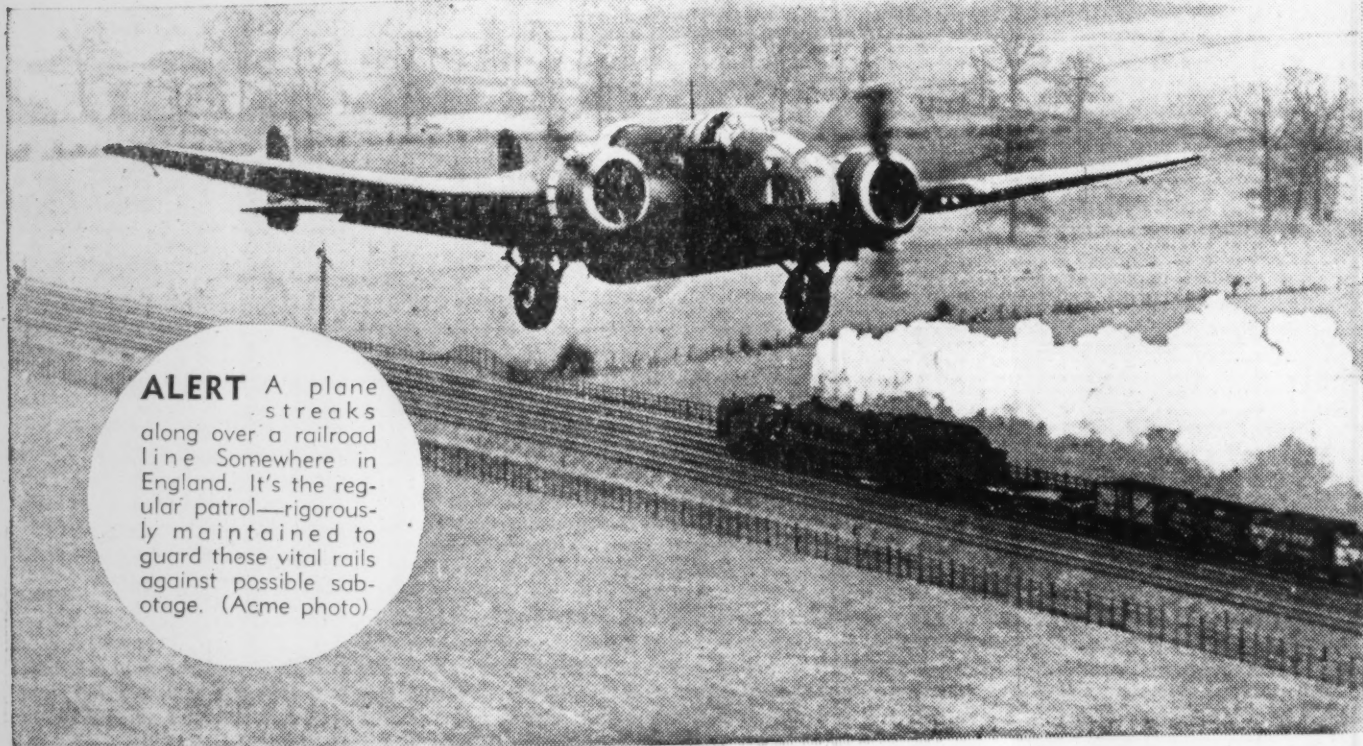

OOPS—PARDON! Mr. Donald J. Fergus was so sorry, but he seemed to lose control of his locoed sedan in an Oradell (N. J.) one-way street yesterday, and the critter run plumb hawg wild. It wound up thus, its prow busting into the basement of one S. E. Wakeham's dwelling.

IN BLUE All dolled up in a blue Jenny Lind, this is how they'll see the diminutive Lily Pons when she sings her Carnegie Hall concert to Manhattanites on the night of January 27. (Acme photo).

ALERT A plane streaks along over a railroad line Somewhere in England. It's the regular patrol—rigorously maintained to guard those vital rails against possible sabotage. (Acme photo)

DETOUR Whoa! Turn sharp there, mister. Snowplow came upon this big "drift" in Buffalo yesterday and found it to be a parked automobile, buried at curb. (Story on Page 7)
